NAZI LOSSES TOTAL HALF MILLION

Fuehrer Is Expected to Make French Peace Offer

Hitler May Try to Split Allied Rank

Great Land, Air Attack on Paris Might Come If France Refuses Germans' Offer

London, May 31 (AP)—Expectations that Adolf Hitler might try to split the British and French allies with separate offers of peace were voiced today as British troops in Flanders still poured from the inferno across the channel.

Informed observers, weighing the possibilities of the next Nazi stroke, considered these possibilities.

A separate peace offer to France with a great land and air assault on Paris if France refuses.

A threat of an Italian flank attack.

An ultimatum to Britain to accept Germany's terms or face "total war."

Authorized sources in Berlin expected a "sensational announcement" to come from a conference between Hitler and Paul Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister.

But both official utterances and the press indicated no weakening of the allies' "unbreakable bond."

Formidable Fortress

Britain's island kingdom was being turned into a formidable fortress against the possibilities of a direct Nazi attack and Supply Minister Herbert Morrison warned of extreme measures against war factories showing signs of slackness, irresolution, slow starting or muddle.

With the retreat from Flanders giving Germany potential bombing bases only five minutes from England's southeast coast, the government and the people concentrated their attention on the "fifth column" menace.

From some quarters came a demand that General Sir Edmund Ironside, commander-in-chief of the home forces, be given plenary powers to coordinate military and civil defense measures—under martial law, if necessary.

To make sure that any invading forces dropped from the air would find no effective help from within the country, Scotland Yard pressed its hunt for fifth-column equipment—arms, munitions and uniforms. Police went through every wharf and warehouse along the Thames, carefully searching furniture and other goods stored there by refugees from the continent.

In early-morning raids in several London districts, an undisclosed number of fifth-column suspects were arrested and held for internment.

While Home Secretary Sir John Anderson and Health Minister Malcolm MacDonald warned the nation of the very real and near danger of German bombing attacks—power of which the people saw in the battle-scarred transports that brought home weary B.E.F. survivors—Vice-Admiral Sir John Somerville assured Britons their forces were prepared to meet any attempted Nazi landing, whether from the air or from the sea.

Prospect of Call.

The home secretary warned there was "every prospect of an early call upon the civil defense forces" and urged those forces to keep "fully manned, in a state of readiness and efficiency."

In 15 coast towns 39,000 children (61 per cent of the school population) already have been registered for shipment to districts further west.

Instructions were issued to civilians on air raid precautions. The public was warned to stay away from windows because investigation of the crash of a German bomber at Clacton-on-Sea disclosed most of the injuries were caused by flying glass splinters.

Morgenthau Says Treasury Facing End of Borrowing

Additional Taxes, Higher Debt Limit Essential to Meet Demands for Nation's Defense

Washington, May 31 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau said today that "additional taxes" and "an increase in the limit" on the public debt both "are essential" to meet expanded demands for national defense.

Urging enactment of a $656,000,000 defense tax bill, the Treasury head told the House ways and means committee that as things stood now, the treasury's borrowing power would be "completely exhausted" by the end of next February.

Also, he added, the working balance of the treasury—now about $1,300,000,000—would be "dangerously depleted" by that time.

"The maintenance of a balance approximating the present one," Morgenthau testified, "is distinctly in the interest of economy and financial strength and is especially to be desired in the troubled world of today."

Nothing that the measure also provides for a $3,000,000,000 increase in the federal debt limit.

Evacuated Britons Send Up Prayers For More Warplanes to Beat Enemy

(By The Associated Press)

A southeast coast port in England, May 31—German bombing planes raiding the allied retreat from Flanders "attempted to pursue our ships right up to the harbor," a soldier of the British expeditionary force said on his arrival here today.

"I never expected to get back alive," he said. "Our work was carried out in a blizzard of bombs and machinegun bullets. Jerry attacked in waves every 10 or 15 minutes. Still they kept coming."

The fun began when we were about six miles off the coast. That's where we had to run the gauntlet. The bombers not only dropped their loads but attempted

Herbert Sargent, Jr., Pilot, in Hospital; Were in Attendance at Glider Meet

Wurtsboro, May 31—A holiday crowd gathered at the local airport for the opening of a four-day glider meet, saw Miss Dorothy Crabtree, 22, of Rutherford, N. J., riding in the front seat of a Piper Cub plane meet instant death as the machine struck a tree during a take-off at 7:45 o'clock last evening.

Herbert Sargent, Jr., of 220 Grand Avenue, Jersey City, pilot of the plane is in Horton Memorial Hospital, Middletown where he was reported this morning in critical condition suffering from a punctured lung and a possible skull fracture.

The plane, which was badly wrecked in the accident, is owned by Mrs. Virginia Henderson of Middletown.

Made First Flight

Sargent, earlier in the afternoon made the first glider flight to open the meet of the Eastern States Soaring Association with the Hudson Valley Glider Club as the host organization.

The pilot and Miss Crabtree, who was his fiancée, attempted the takeoff from the field at about 7:45 o'clock. The machine apparently failed to rise as he had expected and crashed head-on into an 80-foot tree on the opposite side of the field from where they boarded the plane.

An investigation of the accident was made by State Trooper C. W. Seymour, stationed at Wurtsboro and Coroner Ralph Breakley of Monticello. Definite information as to what could have caused the accident, however, awaits the recovery of the pilot.

Sargent, who was known as an experienced pilot, had attended the New York University School of Aeronautical Engineers. He is president of the Hudson Valley Glider Club and had attended various meets of that organization.

Navy Will Launch New Battlecraft

First of 68 New Vessels Goes Down Ways at Philadelphia Yard

Washington, May 31 (AP)—The first new American battleship in 19 years slides into the water tomorrow at the start of a drive to speed warship construction unmatched in intensity since World War days.

The 35,000-ton U. S. S. Washington will be launched at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. It is the first of 68 warships still under the riveting hammer which the navy, by day and night work, intends to complete months ahead of their

U. S. Might Have Serious Trouble In Pacific Region

Washington Details First Minister to Australia as Tokyo Demands Voice in War Outcome

Washington, May 31 (AP)—Problems of crucial interest hang over the Far East as the United States sends Clarence E. Gauss to Australia to become its first minister to that British dominion.

Gauss, now conferring with officials here, will leave Monday for San Francisco and will sail June 6.

State department officials and the new minister himself have no illusions on the seriousness of his task and the questions of tremendous import that may confront him before many weeks.

If the German army should overrun Britain and France, many well-informed students here believe that the United States will face a more immediate crisis in the Pacific than in the Atlantic. And they believe it may arise first over the Dutch East Indies.

Japan has issued statements calling for maintenance of the status quo of the islands, but inner circles in Tokyo said today that a German victory in the European war would bring up the question of the disposition of their oil, rubber and tin. The Japanese government was pictured as uneasy over the prospect that these raw materials would be diverted entirely to the Reich.

Would the United States fight to preserve the status quo of the Dutch East Indies?

Many officials in the administration evade the answer, but do not rule out entirely the possibility. The American fleet is still based at Hawaii, and there is no indication here that it will be withdrawn for the time being.

Tokyo, May 31 (AP)—Japan will demand a voice in any settlement of the European war in order to protect her interests in the Netherlands East Indies, circles close to the government said today.

While Japan is neutral in a conflict which it is believed here, may end abruptly this summer in a German victory, official quarters declared:

"Japan cannot be indifferent to important changes in the status of areas and territories within the Pacific zone."

German acquisition of the Netherlands East Indies, or practical control of them through a puppet Dutch government, is regarded with increasing uneasiness in view of the enormous importance of the islands' resources of oil, rubber and tin.

The view prevails in certain

Snowbank Vies With Spring at Campsite

The majority of the 1,000 Memorial Day visitors to the state's public campsite at North Lake, near Haines Falls, know it was a tough winter.

In the Greene county uplands the day was cool and sunny and everybody had the illusion warmer days had come at last. A walk along the trail which leads to the Hudson escarpment, however, gave everyone the shock of their lives.

For about 500 feet from the eastern edge of the lake a three-foot snowbank stretched its cold bulk beneath the almost solid roof of trees.

Thousand March In Holiday Parade

One of Best Local Turnouts Is Seen as Sunny Skies Return to Region

Under sunny skies one of the finest Memorial Day parades passed through Kingston's street on Thursday morning with fully a thousand men, women, boys and girls in the line of march, which was viewed by thousands who thronged the sidewalks along Broadway.

The parade was headed by Lieutenant Fred Stout in one of the police cars and he was followed by Officers Bowers and Relyea on motorcycles and a group of city officials, headed by Mayor C. J. Heislman. The group dropped out of the parade in front of the city hall and took seats on the reviewing stand erected in front of the high school, where the parade was reviewed.

The Kingston fire department was represented by Chief Joseph L. Murphy and Deputy Fire Chief Fred M. Leverich and Firemen Richter, Myer, Maines, Disch, Ahl, Geary, Cornelski, Hardwick and Sanford. Commissioner Charles Grunwald, of the fire board, also marched with the fire department.

Two fire companies were represented in the parade, Excelsior Hose of this city with the Ladies' Auxiliary, and the Port Ewen fire department and Ladies' Auxiliary, and the department fire and drum corps.

The local units of the 156th Field Artillery made an impressive appearance and the drum corps, composed of members of the local units, making their second public appearance—the first was in the Apple Blossom parade earlier in the month—made a big hit with the spectators.

Bergan Dismisses 4 Actions Against Lackawack Board

New York Contention That Claimants Had Not Met Administrative Code Upheld by Court

Four actions brought by residents of the Lackawack reservoir country against the Commissioners of the Board of Water Supply of the City of New York have been dismissed on the grounds the actions were brought against the wrong party.

The dismissal was granted by Justice Francis Bergan on motion of Vincent G. Connelly in behalf of the Board of Water Supply. Manuel Dittenheimer appeared for the four claimants.

The matter came up at the May special term in Albany county before Justice Bergan. At that time a motion was made on behalf of the city to dismiss the four complaints of Charles O'Connell, Werner Koons, Grace Clark and Richard Misner. The city contended that plaintiffs had not complied with the Administrative Code of the City of New York and that is suing the members of the Board of Water Supply they had named the wrong defendants.

Against Proper Parties

Mr. Dittenheimer argued that the actions were laid against the proper parties. The city then moved for a dismissal of all four complaints on the theory that there was no cause of action against the Commissioners.

Justice Bergan has granted the motion of the City without costs dismissing the complaints. Justice Bergan holds that under the Administrative Code of the City of

Joys of Nations at Peace Suffer No Eclipse in U. S. on Memorial Day

(By the Associated Press)

A nation grateful that Memorial Day found it at peace paid homage again yesterday to the men who died in its wars—from the ragged continentals of dimmed memory to the doughboys who fought on the fields of France.

Reminders of the present European conflict were dominant. In Washington both President Roosevelt and Congress cancelled their customary holiday to devote their energies to speeding the national defense program. Memorial Day orators made frequent mention of the war.

The joys of a country at peace, however, suffered no eclipse. The World's Fair at New York entered

Wild Fight Goes on to Guard Exit

Naval Guns Cooperate With British Planes to Make Dunkerque Unsafe for Nazis

Paris, May 31 (AP)—Two divisions of the French rear-guard for the allied retreat from Flanders have fought their way to Dunkerque, it was announced at this afternoon's ministry of information press conference.

Port Is Inferno

British Tommies fought hand-to-hand with German troops south of the Yser canal today in a fierce struggle to hold the allies' "escape" port of Dunkerque and check the advance of Nazi mechanized legions toward the sea.

Dunkerque reverberated like a kettle-drum with the din of anti-aircraft fire.

Naval guns cooperating with British pursuit squadrons operating from English bases, only a few flying minutes away, made the air "literally forbidden" to Nazi bombers.

Thousands of fagged troops, both French and English, streamed into the port through a pass between muddy sea water, several miles wide, which girded the city like the moat of an ancient fortress. Canal locks opened by the allies spilled deepening water over the flooded defense area. The withdrawing allied troops continued to be evacuated from Dunkerque by the thousands.

The Germans reported wiping out a British pocket near Cassel, 20 miles south of Dunkerque, when the Tommies attempted to break through to the north to reach Dunkerque and embark in the great retreat from Flanders.

Trapped French forces in the Lille area were said in Berlin to have "practically ceased to exist."

Important Communication

Word spread through German military headquarters meanwhile that a communication "of the greatest importance" has been received from Italy—possibly setting the date for Italy's entrance into the war.

An early attempt by Adolf Hitler to split England and France with separate offers of peace—under threat of calling Germany's axis partner, Italy, into the war—was forecast in London.

Hitler's purported peace offer, it was said in London, would be swiftly rejected. The allies have vowed to make no separate peace on any terms.

The German Fuehrer and his propaganda minister, Goebbels, were reported in conference at Hitler's western front headquarters to prepare a "sensational announcement"—possibly the peace overture envisioned in London.

Nazis asserted that 1,000,000 French soldiers alone have been

Paris Says Figures Are Authentic

Berlin Meanwhile Says Main Force of French Army Dispersed or Captured

Fight Goes On

German Command Admits Fierce Resistance in Coastal Area

(By The Associated Press)

The semi-official Telefrance agency at Paris asserted today that the Germans had lost half a million men since they began their invasion of the low countries May 10.

This figure "finds itself written in authentic German documents," the agency reported, without giving additional details.

Berlin says the main forces of French troops in northeastern France have been dispersed or captured, the German high command declared today but added that some of them were "still resisting locally."

The resistance came from detachments which the high command said were "encircled or scattered."

The high command also acknowledged that remnants of the British expeditionary force still offered desperate resistance in the coastal section around Dunkerque, but British forces near Cassel, on the southern edge of the triangular Flanders trap, have been "annihilated."

A German motor torpedo boat was reported to have sunk an allied destroyer off the Belgian coast. The high command said that the German navy had taken over the defense of the entire Belgian and Netherlands coast along territory in German occupation.

Despite unfavorable weather the harbor facilities of Dunkerque, center of the coastal base of the triangle from which the British and French were trying to extricate themselves, was raided again yesterday, the high command said.

These operations, with sea forces lending a hand to the Nazi armies, were facilitated by establishment of German naval defense along the Dutch and Belgian coasts.

"The navy all along the Dutch coast and the coastal regions of Belgium and France in German hands took over the coastal defense."

"German speedboats succeeded in sinking by torpedo an enemy destroyer off the Belgian coast. In the course of the night of May 30-31 British airplanes again attacked non-military targets in northern Germany."

Encircled in Two Lobes

British forces encircled in one of two lobes, dangling from the triangular pocket, that near Cassel about 20 miles south of Dunkerque, were said to have been "crushed" in an attempt to break through to the north.

The other lobe of envelopment, according to the Germans, is a tightly-packed area a few miles square, south of Lille.

The success of the German envelopment was said to have freed Nazi troops for other tasks.

"The main force of German divisions in Artois and Flanders now are released for new tasks," said the high command communication.

"The number of prisoners and the amount of booty could not yet be established even approximately."

The Germans declared that resistance in the Flanders pocket would be quickly shattered.

The attack against the remainder of the English army in the flat country only a few kilometers deep, protected by the rising waters of canals along the coast between Furnes and Bergues and west of Dunkerque, is in progress.

"The opponent here is stoutly resisting in order to rescue as many soldiers as possible on ships, if necessary, even without equipment."

The French forces, apparently in worse position for withdrawal to the coast, were said in the main to have been dispersed or captured, but the high command acknowledged that some detachments "are still resisting locally."

Squeezed in Traps

Many of the French were squeezed into two subordinate traps north of Lille and south of Lille, which lies off the apex of the bloody Flanders triangle, 40 miles or so from Dunkerque.

How many poilus were jammed into these two areas—about 50 square miles and 24 square miles respectively—no one knew.

The Germans told of wiping out a British pocket in the Cassel ing food. Women volunteers, regardless of fatigue and long hours, cut mountains of sandwiches and served rivers of tea at makeshift canteens for men who hadn't had a square meal for nearly a week and only snatches of sleep for the last two weeks.

A lieutenant-commander in charge of one of the naval vessels bringing home troops said:

"I don't think we have a crumb of food or ever a cup of cocoa left in the ship. My men have been magnificent — uncomplaining in the face of bombing and machine-gunning. We are quite determined that not a man shall be left behind for want of a ship."

One of the French soldiers among those brought to English shores said that, in the withdrawal toward the coast, "we were machine-gunned so often we almost got used to it."

"We always were ready to jump into the nearest ditch to avoid German planes sweeping low and mowing down refugees and others indiscriminately," he continued. "Always there were some who did not rise again. One almost gets used to that, too."

It was announced today that the battle-worn thousands will be given a well-earned rest. A short leave will enable the military authorities to get them reassembled.

Large Proportion Removed

Already a large proportion of the B. E. F.—its members proclaiming their spirit unbroken after braving hell and high water—is said to have been withdrawn from the Nazi death trap in Belgium and northern France through one of the greatest rear guard actions in military history. "Before our troops made their retreat," said a British officer, "they have in almost every case succeeded in blowing up gasoline dumps and leaving nothing useful to the enemy. They stayed to do this at the risk of capture or being shot."

The Tommies said word of the surrender of the Belgian army ordered by King Leopold III, which exposed their left flank to the Germans, first came as a rumor which no one believed.

"There already had been rumors of different sorts," a young gunner remarked, "but we realized this one was the real thing a few hours later, when the Germans suddenly appeared all around us."

"They were firing at us from what had been Belgian lines until a short time before. The order was given to retreat. There was nothing else to do."

"Then came hours of tramping along roads and across fields and ditches to the sea. "We never knew when German machine-guns would begin firing on us from behind some hedge or clump of trees. They seemed to be around every corner."

Belgians Still Convinced
One of a group of five Belgian officers, who said they were astonished at King Leopold's order to surrender, said that "we do not intend to stop fighting on orders of Leopold—and there are thousands of other Belgian soldiers of the same opinion."

Describing the difficulties of the Belgian campaign, the Tommies said the country was "overrun with spies" who tipped off nearly every move they made to German bombers.

An officer from a destroyer that helped cover the embarkation with her guns and then acted as an escort for the transports described a shattered town in Flanders as he saw it from the bridge of his ship.

"There is not a wall in the place that is more than two feet high," he said. "What I remembered as a jolly little town full of cafes and hotels and gaiety now is just a pile of rubble."

"I saw one bomb hit a big modern hotel. It collapsed like a pack of cards."

While the navy and merchant marine continued shuttling across the channel to rescue troops and fishing smacks were pressed into service because they could operate in the shallow waters close to the coast, the returning Flanders veterans loudly praised the royal navy and the royal air force that cleared a way across the channel as German bombers attacked the ships. They charged that German planes bombed hospital as well as troops ships.

One Tommy said: "I never believed anything like the wall of fire our ships put up to screen the troops was possible. The din was incredible. Shells were falling in a mathematically straight line behind our positions."

Hail of Bombs
"Above and behind the line British planes dived and dropped a hail of bombs. Jerry never had a chance to get at us. I take off my hat to the chaps who did that job."

Many of the survivors had to swim to the ships through a hail of bomb splinters. They still wore wet and oil-soaked when they landed here. But one of their officers declared:

"Our losses in the last few days have been far less than might be expected. But the slaughter among the Germans has been incredible. The German commanders seem to be throwing away their men's lives."

With the return of B. E. F. survivors, the word "Hun" is being used for the first time since the war started. One soldier, telling of German bombing and strafing attacks on Belgian refugees, said:

"There was no excuse for that. I'll never forget the way those hunks treated the refugees."

Tough cockneys who insisted they would be returning to France at the first opportunity declared all they wanted was "more airplanes and it will be a different story."

Still so deafened from the din of battle that they scarcely hear, they told how Nazi bombers swarmed over the battlefields 50 and 60 at a time. One of them remarked:

"We almost got used to the bombs, and our casualties were surprisingly small considering the number of bombs that were dropped."

An artillery sergeant said the German airmen were "no match for the R.A.F. and they knew it," and told of watching one British fighter take on seven German planes and bring down three of them.

One French soldier reaching safety said he and 21 comrades were in a French ship which struck a magnetic mine and sank. He alone was rescued.

Some rescued men were in such a state they had to be met at the ship with uniforms before they could land.

Thousand Attend Cemetery Service

Fully one thousand people gathered for Memorial Day services in St. Mary's cemetery yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. A special altar had been erected on the platform just outside the beautiful new McGill Memorial Chapel, recently completed.

The exercises consisted of a high Mass sung by the Very Rev. Msgr. John J. Stanley, a former pastor of St. Mary's Church. He was assisted by the Rev. Peter J. Fox as master of ceremonies. Seated in the sanctuary were His Excellency Most Rev. James E. Kearney, D. D., bishop of Rochester, and the Very Rev. Martin J. Drury, P. R. V. F. During the Mass Dean Drury introduced Bishop Kearney who delivered a most inspiring sermon.

At the close of the Mass, absolution services for the dead were conducted by Msgr. Stanley. This was the 24th annual Memorial Day Mass conducted in St. Mary's cemetery.

U. S. Agent Talks Here On Counterfeit Money

A United States Secret Service agent addressed a joint luncheon meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Wednesday. The meeting was very largely attended by service club members and guests. Mayor C. J. Heiselman, Police Chief Charles Phinney and District Attorney N. LeVan Haver were included among the guests.

A motion picture, "Know Your Money" authorized by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury, was shown. This picture depicted the twin dangers of counterfeit money and government check forgery and was released by the department in order to acquaint citizens with the racket and also as an aid to crime prevention.

Following the motion picture, the secret service agent stressed the importance of cooperation upon the part of every American citizen. Police authorities in all municipalities cooperate with the United States Secret Service and the local police should be first notified when a counterfeit bill is received.

It was brought out by the speaker and portrayed on the screen that there are only three types of currency printed by the United States Government for circulation. They are federal reserve notes, which bear green serial numbers and seal. United States Notes, which bear red numbers and seal and silver Certificates, which bear blue numbers and seal.

Denominations of bills may be identified by portraits as follows:

- Washington on all $1 bills.
- Jefferson on all $2 bills.
- Lincoln on all $5 bills.
- Hamilton on all $10 bills.
- Jackson on all $20 bills.
- Grant on all $50 bills.
- Franklin on all $100 bills.

On how to detect counterfeit bills, he advised to compare the suspected bill with a genuine of the same type and demoniation observing carefully the following features:

PORTRAIT: Genuine is lifelike, stands out from oval background which is a fine screen of regular lines; notice particularly the eyes. The counterfeit is dull, smudgy or unnaturally white; scratchy; background is dark with irregular and broken lines.

SEAL: On genuine, sawtooth points around rim are identical and sharp. On counterfeit sawtooth points are usually different, uneven, broken off.

SERIAL NUMBERS: Genuine distinctive style, firmly and evenly printed; same color as seal. Counterfeit, style different, poorly printed, badly spaced, uneven in appearance.

PAPER: Genuine bills are printed on distinctive paper containing very small red and blue silk threads.

RUBBING a bill will NOT prove whether it is genuine or counterfeit; ink will rub off of either.

When a stranger gives you a counterfeit bill, do not return it. Telephone the police at once. Try to delay the passer under a pretext. Avoid argument and if necessary tell them the police will handle the matter. Write down a description of the passer leaves and take the tag numbers of any cars involved.

On how to detect counterfeit coins the following information was given.

RING all coins on a hard surface. Genuine coins sound clear and bell-like. Counterfeits sound dull.

FEEL all coins; most counterfeit coins feel greasy.

COMPARE the reading (the corrugated outer edge) of a suspected coin with one known to be genuine. The ridges on genuine coins are distinct and evenly spaced. On counterfeit coins they are poorly spaced and irregular.

CUT the edge of suspected coins. Most counterfeits are made of soft metal which can be easily cut with a knife.

TEST suspected silver coins with acid. Scrape the surface and apply drop of acid. If bad, the

FOOD HERE, FAMINE THERE

One thing seems certain, in the midst of many uncertainties. There will be widespread famine in Europe by another year. The severest winter that continent has known in more than a century has been followed by a late spring and floods which have damaged many fertile areas. This would have meant short crops even if the full agricultural manpower has been able to do its work. But men have been called from their plowing and sowing to make war or to wait for war at their country's borders. In some rich farm lands only old men, women and children are tilling the fields.

Furthermore, in the war zones, whole communities have been depopulated as refugees have been driven from their homes and sent in panic flight into regions not able to support them. France and England, with millions to feed in addition to their own people and their armies, will not long be able to meet the heavy burden.

This year's crops in the United States and Canada depend on the weather. If it is favorable, they may be excellent. If it is not, they will have smaller than normal crops. We, however, have great surpluses on which to draw. In fact, these surplus stocks of food have been a problem to us. Says the Chicago Daily News:

"If Europe heads into famine, we might as well make up our minds that we will have to give them whatever food we can ship. There will probably be little 'regular money' anywhere if the war keeps up at the present clip."

GETTING INTO CANADA

Americans to whom Canada is a summer playground have been worried a little by sudden agitation at Ottawa for stricter scrutiny of visitors. During the winter and spring, Canadian tourist officials have been insisting that the war would make no difference, and vacationers and business agents from this side of the border could enter as freely and informally as ever. But it is now feared that proposals made by Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe of the federal government, for the purpose of barring many aliens, might discourage our people by making their entrance more difficult.

Canadian tourist officials are frankly alarmed, and fear to lose the good will and the no less good dollars brought them in recent years by millions of Americans. This vacation industry has been counted on, too, by Canadian government financiers, to help balance their war budget. Such contributions from our side of the line, in a good year, run up to several hundred million dollars.

It is obviously a real problem for Canada to protect a 3,000-mile border from dangerous aliens, without making things unpleasant for honest neighbors and friends. But it can probably be worked out satisfactorily. Americans, for their part, can afford to be good sports about it, cheerfully taking a few more minutes and answering a few more questions than usual, and making it easier by having credentials or identification papers with them. Passports have not been required, and apparently will not be now.

LIPPMANN'S WARNING

If Walter Lippmann, America's leading commentator on public affairs, is right in his estimate of the present war situation, the case for political cooperation is far stronger than most Americans have yet realized. Mr. Lippmann recently studied the problems at first hand in Europe. Writing for the New York Herald-Tribune, he has foreseen a possible trapping of the Allied army in France and a possible trapping likewise of the British fleet. That seems more likely since the surrender of Belgium. He says it would make Hitler master of Europe and also of the Atlantic Ocean, where we have no navy.

What would Italy and Japan do then? He says they have an agreement and will cooperate against us. It is possible, he thinks, that the allied dictators will impose terms of peace on the United States along with Britain and France.

"Let no one delude himself and others," warns Mr. Lippmann, "into thinking that this is just another and more exciting chapter in the long debate of the past two years, as to whether the United States should help the Allies a little, a lot or not at all." We shall not be allowed to decide at our leisure what we are going to do for others, or for ourselves.

In this situation, he insists that every political leader must put country above party, and it is imperative for political leaders and groups to cooperate for the national safety.

THE STARS REPORT

It is pleasing to learn from an American astrological association that the world is approaching a new and better era. It reports as follows:

"Astrology proves that there are major culminating cycles that provoke world changes. An example of this was the Christian era, when the sun was retrograding in the sign of Taurus. Today, with the sun in the same position in relation to the zodiac, the world structure is being broken down, making ready for a new era to come. The sun is now approaching Aquarius, whose keyword is universal brotherhood. Such fraternalism may be expected to follow the current European war."

That's fine. But when does it start? Some of these starry cycles run to hundreds of years, and even a thousand years are nothing much to the zodiac.

"I have said in my haste," Solomon might have remarked, "that all men writing war bulletins are liars."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

TREATING PATIENTS WITH METRAZOL

When the family or friends of an inmate of a mental institution read of the wonderful success of insulin and metrazol in curing mental ailments by means of shock, they want to know whether insulin or metrazol treatment should be given in this particular case. Then, when they find that the patient has practically undergone a "fit" or convulsion, and is very sick after the convulsion, they wonder whether or not they should allow or suggest that the shock treatment be given. When they learn further that best results are obtained by this shock method in recent or early cases, particularly during the first six months, they become still further confused.

It is here that they should be guided by their physician and by the physicians of the mental hospital, who have at hand the results obtained by this new method. The figures show complete cure in some, great improvement in others, slight improvement in a few, and failures in a few.

Dr. J. A. Cummins, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, gives the results of metrazol treatment of 77 cases at the Ontario Hospital, Hamilton, Ontario.

In addition to the metrazol treatment, these patients were given the routine treatment of the hospital as to occupation (some combined physical and mental work), recreation, and reeducation in which the reason for their mental or behavior symptoms was explained to them.

What were the results obtained in these 77 cases? The results obtained were classified as (a) completely cured, (b) improved—able to go home and to work but not a complete return to their full efficiency mentally, (c) slightly improved—more easily managed, able to do simple work, and (d) no improvements in their symptoms or in their management.

Of the 77 patients, 57 in all have benefited, and 20 were classified as not benefited but 7 of these "are making a greatly improved hospital adjustment, and are much happier for having received the treatment." There were no deaths caused by the treatment.

That the earlier this shock treatment is given, the better are the patient's chances of being benefited was proven by the fact that "all" cases where symptoms had been present for less than six months were benefited and 50 per cent of them made a complete recovery.

DARK JOURNEY

BABSON ON BUSINESS

WILL GREAT BRITAIN COLLAPSE?

Babson Draws Lesson For United States

Charleston, S. C., May 31.—Without doubt these are the most critical days in at least a century of world history. Only a few months ago we were talking about a "phony" war. Only a few weeks ago the Allied generals were talking about that "crazy paper hanger" in Germany. Even the London Times which arrived here a few days back discussed the peace terms which England would inflict on Germany when Hitler was mopped up.

When recently talking with our high government officials, they told me that the French army was invincible. They admitted that the war might be a long struggle, but insisted that no army could whip the French. They stated that it was the largest, most completely equipped army in the world. They also spoke in highest terms of its commanders and especially of the French strategists. Certainly, it makes one lose confidence in army officials to see what has taken place only a few weeks after such statements. For evidence, read The Congressional Record and the report of committee hearings.

Maginot Line Like Chinese Wall
What has happened to this "invincible" army is now known to everyone. Many are asking the hows and whys of what has recently occurred. The simple truth is that Germany has developed and used an entirely new form of warfare. As this new technique has been explained to readers by other writers, I will not go into details. The great Maginot Line, built at the expense of a billion dollars during the past twenty years seems as obsolete as the Chinese Wall. Get this point, however: The German successes have been due to the willingness of the allies to depend upon their prestige, material wealth, and "what licked Germany before."

There is still time for the allies to turn the tide or at least stop the German advances. The war is not hopeless for Great Britain. It is true that the Germans control one side of the English Channel, but England still controls the other side. It is true that London is now only a few miles from Germany's new air fields, but it is likewise true that these German air bases are only a few miles from British shores. Moreover, do not forget that England still has her navy and merchant marine intact.

Right Over Might

The answer to the question, "Will Great Britain collapse?" will be determined not by German blitzkriegs, but by the character of the English people. From time immemorial, new methods of warfare have been developed. Those nations which first grasped and used these new methods have, temporarily, been successful. The ultimate force, however, which has determined the result has been spiritual rather than material. The "blitzkrieg" is no more important in the eyes of history than the invention of the long bow to take the place of spears, of powder and shot to replace battering rams, of iron ships to overcome wooden frigates.

These are days when we should read ancient history. A study of the rise and fall of Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece, Rome, and the Spanish empire shows that new methods of warfare have won battles but have never won wars. This is being demonstrated by what I saw in the Far East last September. There barefooted and poorly-equipped Chinese armies are holding up Japan's modern war machine fully equipped with airplanes, tanks, and artillery.

Gang Warfare

Let us be calm for a moment and visualize what is now happening among the German-conquered nations. As various countries are taken over, a Hitler aide is placed in control. There are now dictators in Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Poland. These already are beginning to differ as to policy. Recently other dictators have been placed in Norway, Denmark, Holland, and Belgium. Considering the native brutality and dishonesty of these sub-dictators, isn't it certain that they will soon begin fighting among themselves? This is all the more likely when one considers that these nations all have different languages, great traditions, and diverse instincts. Brutality, deceit, and ingenuity will be used by those to trap innocent and peaceful neutrals. "A leopard cannot change its spots." History shows that if the English race is willing to stake their lives and property, they in the end will save both; but not in any other way.

Here in the United States, we need at least fifty thousand airplanes to protect North and South America. If we can produce four million pleasure cars a year, we certainly ought to be able to produce fifty thousand military planes. I am behind those who demand adequate defense for this hemisphere. We must be in a position to give effective aid to Canada and the West Indies whenever they ask for it, without demanding a penny for our services. We, however, must remember that battleships, airplanes, and tanks will not save America any more than these things have thus far saved the allies. Security cannot be purchased; it comes only through courage, self-sacrifice, and discipline.

It also should be remembered that these airplanes which we are building can be used against us by an INSIDE enemy just as easily as we can use them against outside foes. This means a character-building campaign should be a definite part of our defense program. Now more than ever, it is vital that the people of the strongest character should furnish the men who are to be trained for this new and all-important branch of our national defense. Let religious and civic leaders who are serious in their prayers read this last sentence.

Kingston has long been noted for its musical talent and during the many years many fine musical productions have been presented by local talent. One of the finest productions was that of the opera Egypta given by home talent on the stage of the Kingston Opera House on March 11, 1902.

Among those who took leading parts in the production were Mrs. Mildred Rich Boice, Mrs. Jane Hunt Sahler, Miss Katherine Van Buren, Miss Grace Horton, Miss Mabel H. Anderson, Dr. George H. Van Gaasbeek, George H. Oellershausen, Elmer Burger, Ernest W. Kearney, Dr. C. H. Bishop, Charles Pfeiffer and William Kuehn.

Two of the children's parts in the opera were taken by Harold Styles and Harry Yale.

The music for the production was furnished by the Opera House orchestra under the baton of George H. Muller.

That year also marked the formation of the Twaalfskil Golf Club, which had leased the Post farm of the Montrose Cemetery Association, and had forty men at work getting the grounds ready for the proposed opening in June of that year.

At a meeting held in the office of Captain Everett Fowler on May 21, 1902, the following officers of the new golf club were elected: President, Judge A. T. Clearwater; vice president, Watson M. Freer; treasurer, Frank Coykendall; and secretary, Charles De La Vergne.

The board of governors was composed of Harry S. Coykendall, Judge Clearwater, Frank Coykendall, Edward Coykendall, Frank D. Dewey, Captain Fowler, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, George J. Smith and Judge J. G. Van Etten.

At the time of the election of officers the club had a membership of 102 of the leading men of Kingston, who were interested in the famous old Scotch game of golf.

But few of the men active in the formation of the club are still alive.

Newspaper accounts of the first annual election of the new club stated that the Post farm had been leased for a term of years with an option to purchase.

The golf club is still active with one of the finest courses in the Hudson river valley, and numbers among its membership many going to have a great army, a great air force, a great navy. Maybe we are, but I was in the senate in 1917, and any enemy of ours today is going to have to be a patient, if he wants to catch us prepared.

Rep.: What do you mean?

Sen.: (snorting disgustedly): Do you think industry is better prepared today to take up the burden of vast armament than it was 23 years ago? I was there. I know. The first question is, what are we preparing for? War? All right. Do you know that nine months after we had gone into the World War, with an industry already keyed to Allied orders, we had produced only 430,000 rifles; 58,500 automatic pistols and were capable of turning out only 300,000 rounds of small arms ammunition a month when we needed 10 times that many?

Rep.: Well, I guess....

Sen.: Do you know it was 10 months after we entered the war that we got our first fully equipped division in the field? That out of 19 factories producing cannons, there were three at the end of the war that did not even have their machine-tool equipment? Do you know that a machine ordnance has a war time catalogue of 10,000 items?

Rep.: (paying check hurriedly): So long, Senator, I've got to get back on the job.

Presidential History Seems to Be Shaping as in 1916 as Issues Stack Up Same Way

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, May 31.—Will political history repeat itself? Events are shaping up toward a repetition of the remarkable campaign of 1916 for the presidency.

Then as now a World War was on.

Then as now a Democratic administration was in power and the President was a candidate for reelection.

Then as now the issue was the capacity of the incumbent administration to maintain an adequate defense and protect American rights.

Then as now the Republican party just before convention time, had not crystallized its desire for any particular candidate. The politicians had various candidates to offer of the usual type, but a dark horse was constantly being mentioned.

The name of the "dark horse" was Charles Evans Hughes. For eight years he had been serving on the Supreme Court of the United States, having renounced political life when he left the governorship of the state of New York in 1908. The political leaders didn't want him. Efforts here and there of friends to coral delegates were publicly discouraged by Mr. Hughes. He went so far as to repudiate the sponsorship of the late Frank Hitchcock, a political general of renown, who tried to line up delegates for him.

The main reason the old guard politicians didn't want Hughes was because they had had no part in bringing him into prominence and they knew he would not be under any obligation to them if he was elected. Nation-wide sentiment for Hughes was obvious. The late George Harvey, then editor of "The North American Review," expressed aptly the peculiarities of the situation when he published an article in the spring of 1916 entitled, "Nobody Wants Hughes—Nobody But The People."

The parallel today is that a dark horse is again being mentioned prominently for the Republican nomination—Wendell Willkie. The politicians don't want him. They have had no part in grooming him for the nomination and he would be under no obligations to them. The evidences of his popular strength as distinguished from delegate strength are such that it might be said of Willkie that nobody in the Republican party wants him—nobody but the rank and file of the voters. The arguments advanced in 1916 against the nomination of Mr. Hughes are similar to those now being advanced against Wendell Willkie. It was said that the people wouldn't vote for a man who had been on the bench for eight years—he was out of touch with the people. It was said that Hughes was inflexible, that he would not know how to deal with political problems. So it is being said that a business man is detached or handicapped. Yet Wendell Willkie has in the last few weeks shown he can debate public issues as well as the veterans of politics.

Mr. Hughes came so near winning that but for a fluke of insurgency in California he might have been president. It was the closest contest with one exception in nearly 100 years. He was drafted that year by public sentiment because he was the strongest candidate the Republicans had.

The coming campaign will be based on war issues—on the alleged incapacity of President Roosevelt to organize America for defense because it will be asserted his new deal policies have sapped the economic vitality of the nation and paralyzed industrial capacity at a time of greatest need. The argument behind the Willkie candidacy will be that at this of all times a man of industrial background and executive ability is needed in the White House.

Against the nomination of Willkie it will be contended that a utility man could not be elected, that he would have to bear the burdens of the financial mismanagement by utilities in the past even though his company and his own leadership have not been besmirched. While this type of debate would have been important a few weeks ago, the situation in Europe has had such serious repercussions over here that the issue—as the Republicans now see it—will not be between radicals and conservatives, or between Wall Street or anti-Wall Street, but between a candidate who can assure America's men, women and children real protection against unnecessary bloodshed, and one who has been willing this very week to take chances with the nation's economic preparedness by putting political expediency above normal defense.

Public opinion is changing rapidly. A few weeks ago it was believed the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt was certain. Today this is doubtful because confidence in the administration has been sinking rapidly ever since the revelation of the mistakes made in the defense program of the last few years and in the failure right now to make effective plans for the future.

The American people have no hesitancy in changing horses in midstream as the British did with Chamberlain recently. In November, 1918—in the middle of the war itself—indeed at the climax of the big battle on the western front, the people voted the Democrats out and Republicans into control of both Houses of Congress notwithstanding President Wilson's appeal for a vote of confidence. The immediate cause of the turnover was the mistaken request of the President for a Democratic Congress even though both parties had been contributing paragon support. The parallel today is that the administration insists on keeping New Dealers in charge of all key defense positions and in refusing to make the necessary adjustments which will permit the industrial production of the nation to function efficiently.

The situation calls for a leader in the American government whose liberalism makes him independent of party ties and petty politics; a man in whom industry has confidence and with whom the American Federation of Labor—which has organized the skilled workers of the country—can work harmoniously, a man whom the non-Communist elements in the C. I. O. would find eminently fair. Notwithstanding the opposition of the Republican politicians the nomination of Willkie which was never impossible a few weeks ago is decidedly within the realm of possibility now.

The Senator Agonizes Over U. S. Defenses And Gets His Hair Trimmed To Fit Helmet

By JACK STINNETT

Washington — Capitol barber shop:

Barber: Good afternoon, Senator. Hear you gentlemen may be around all summer.

Senator: Poppycock. Cut it short, I may be wearing a helmet before I get time for another haircut.

Representative (from adjoining chair): Hello, Senator. Sounds like you don't think much of our preparedness program. Or do you?

Sen.: Humph. You know what I think of it, young man. I'm the original one-man armaments bloc. If congress had listened to Bernard Baruch for the last two years—or to me, for that matter—we wouldn't be in this mess.

Rep.: But things will be all right now. With an air force of 50,000 planes, a full peacetime army, and reserves of men and munitions, we won't have anything to worry about, will we?

Sen.: Hah! Maybe yes, and maybe no. But first let me ask you something, Mr. Representative. Aren't you on that House committee that lopped millions off the military appropriations bill last January? Aren't you one of those who told the army they could have only 57 new planes in 1941, and that 37 of those would have to be strictly training planes? And after all that, didn't I see you applauding wildly the other day when the President called for that 50,000-plane airforce?

Rep. (weakly): But conditions change, Senator.

Barber: When I was in the Sen.: Of course, if any one could have foreseen a few years ago that that beer-hall corporal, and his stomach-empty nation were going to blitzkrieg half of Europe, we would have been ready to say enough's enough. But we didn't see that. We just saw the good old Allies standing there in the way and said, "Oh, well, if worst comes to worst, we'll tell old England and France we like them best," and that will fix everything.

Rep.: But Senator....

Sen.: But nothing. Worst has come to worst. And so we say, "Now, we'll arm. Now

N. Y. A. at Woodstock And Furlined Bathtub

Woodstock, May 31—(By Marguerite Hurter)—We are interested in the NYA activities. The Woodstock resident craft center, under the direction of Richard E. Wallach. In trying to get a slant on how the boys live, we were directed to Norman T. Boggs, an old Woodstocker and a man of vision. Boggs is director of education. He was rather formal and hinted that press releases were altogether controlled at Albany, but we could find out this much.

The boys get $30 a month and it costs them $22 a month to live and eat. They have a camp mother and appear to be well dressed and well directed. They spend one week on actual work on the project and the following week studying and brushing up on personal contact. They each share some responsibility in house management.

We cannot say whether they are obliged to mop the floors, but we do know they built their own buildings and have done a fine job with left-over bits of lumber and sash and door donated by interested neighbors.

The boys live in the old Allen house up the hill, where last season Robert Ellwyn housed his Woodstock Theatre group.

The projects include: farming, stone cutting and sculpture, and best of all, and our favorite place to visit—the wool project. This may be because the wool project is directly in back of our house, and we went up there first to find out what had happened to the brook. It seems the boys dammed up the brook which once had been the haven of Woodstock nymphs. They dammed up the brook and now we find it is used to dip or wash wool. They had a huge bath tub there to wash the wool. The first furlined bath tub we can vouch to having viewed out of the funny papers. We snapped a picture of this old tub on the brook, with Clemence Randolph, the interested neighbor, and your little girl reporter standing shyly in the rear. The man in the center in the white shirt is Eugene Victor Caille.

Caille has done fine things for the wool project. The boys seem to be getting somewhere. At least, it was interesting to us to see big bags of wool heaped upon the floor converted into fine spun yarn. When you realize the boys make their own spindles and spools and even make their own dyes, you will begin to appreciate what the NYA vision for true craftsmanship may be.

The wool is donated by the U. S. Federal Reserve. It was fun to watch them spin, comb, and spool the yarn. The dyes are all vegetable. Homestead variety. We preferred spinach and beet tones, and something was said about donating some wool to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who last season dedicated the camp and won the great admiration of the boys.

Mrs. Birge Harrison was present at the laying of the corner stone, and other Woodstock socialites are watching with great approval the advance the boys are making. The boys have a fine picture of Mrs. Roosevelt in the Assembly House. We wanted to borrow the picture and publish it, because little Kiki Randolph was right up in front with the first lady, and Mrs. Birge Harrison.

But—There was red tape. We were told we would have to write Jean Henry, director of publicity at Albany. We wrote Jean but she didn't answer our letter, or maybe the birds in the mail-box just made a nest of it. Which reminds us we shall get today a box at the Woodstock post office, so that letters you write to Woodstock will not be read by anyone but us—not even a robin.

Mr. Boggs kept the picture on his desk, in case Albany said "yes" but meantime, we have dashed out in back with a camera and taken pictures of our own. We like the picture of the boys washing wool, and if Bob Chaler's ghost is hanging around in the pine grove, he will probably hoot: "Baa Baa Black Sheep. Have you any wool? Yessir, master. Three bags full."

Eugene Victor Caille, director of the wool project was born in Paris. He trained in crafts and attended Leipzig Textile School, Germany, and Institute Turgot in France.

Mr. Caille has a fine lot of boys and in case you can get through the red tape, you may sometime visit the wool project at Woodstock.

We are wondering about that furlined bathtub. Wondering whether we can sneak over some chilly morn and have a dip. Or, perhaps, a better idea would be to borrow some wool from the boys and upholster our own bath tub. Which reminds us, that playboy plumber hasn't been around yet to fix the hot water business. Isn't it chilly, these days?

Would Be Irish Gridders
Notre Dame, Ind. (AP)—A pair of muscular Greeks are muscling in on the Fighting Irish. They are George Rassas and Hercules Boreolos who expect to play major roles in Coach Elmer Layden's 1940 football drama. Rassas, 196-pound left and candidate, is the fastest lineman and best passer-catcher on the squad. The Stamford, Conn., husky suffered a broken cheek bone in pre-season scrimmage last fall and rode the bench the rest of the year but in 1938 he played in eight of the nine games. Hercules Boreolos is a shot-put star on the track team in addition to his football prowess. He's a candidate for right guard, with 210 pounds on his 5-foot, 11-inch frame. Herky, who hails from Hammond, Ind., will get major competition for the guard job from Johnny Gubanich, 160-pounder from Phoenixville, Pa.

HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

YESTERDAY: Jan enjoys her evening at the beach ballroom with Derek. That same evening Rose comes home intoxicated. Lance is furious but demands that Rose kiss him.

Chapter 17

"Swell Fight"

HERS was Rose reflected, not an unusual story. A run-away marriage at seventeen to a boy of twenty. Too much love, too much quarreling and too little money. Disillusionment and divorce at nineteen. A determination to make all men pay for the hurt one man had caused her. Burning her fingers, learning hardening. Working as model in wholesale houses, then shops, then salons. Learning clothes and how to wear them. The growing greed for possessions. Then Herman Cornwall.

Herman had been a sagging, paunchy fifty. He had fat hands and light, suspicious eyes. But he had enormous amounts of money and he wanted to marry her. Well, she'd stuck it eight years. At first the clothes, the summer house, the winter house, the servants, the traveling, had made it worthwhile. Then they hadn't. There were men who attracted her, but her greed for possessions prevented her from attempting this sort of escape. For Herman was exceedingly jealous.

If she hadn't mixed her drinks that night and told him she'd never consent to have a child, never under any circumstances. His scolding denunciation struck fire to the pitch-soaked kindling of repression in her and she had shrieked her hate at him.

He permitted her to divorce him at Reno after she'd signed a settlement. Such a little settlement considering Herman's vast wealth. Rose belted the robe tighter about her lovely slim waist and sought the healing solace of a warm scented bath.

A little later, hearing her come down the stairway, Jan slipped into the kitchen and waited until the front door closed. Lance rang his buzzer and she trotted up to him, dreading to face him.

"Did Rose just go out?" he demanded the moment she entered. "Yes. To the Club, probably. It's a grand day for swimming and sunning."

Lance looked as if he hadn't slept at all. "She promised to take me for a drive," he muttered. "She must have forgotten or maybe she went to get the car."

"Well, what is it?" he asked irritably. "Nothing, I guess."

"Oh, I know what's eating you. You think I'm a fool. You and Norma. You don't know, either of you, what it is for a man to hunger for beauty. To ache to hold a woman like Rose in your arms. Sure, I'm a fool! I know it. He wheeled the chair around so his back was toward her. His face, so perfectly planned, thin and hollow now, yet still possessed of a pale, compelling beauty, twitched with feverish emotion.

"I wonder, Jan, if those doctors who patched me up knew everything. Surgery is advancing every day. There might be a man somewhere in this world who could do something with these knees of mine. Damn it, Jan, I want to live! How do I have to be condemned to this chair for the rest of my life?"

Compassion

TEARS pushed hot against her eyelids while compassion wrung her. There was nothing to answer. She wanted to go over to him and put her strong, young arms around him, but she sensed he wouldn't want this. It was not her arms he wanted. She went out quietly.

Johnny came out of his room, a sheepish look on his face. "Jan, forgive me for last night, will you? I'm sorry as the devil. You're just too good for a guy like me."

"I think so, too," she agreed with him serenely. "I accept your apology and I forgive you. Now run along and toot your horn. I'm busy."

He hesitated, opened his mouth, shut it. Her composed smile, her careless, indulgent one, dismissed him and his offense as completely unimportant. He desired, suddenly, to grab her and kiss her, disturb her. He was furious with her. He ran down the steps and slammed the front door.

Opening the linen closet at the end of the hallway, Jan took out clean sheets and a pillowcase and went up on the roof to change Derek's bed. She found Neptune, paws tucked under him, curled up on the blanket asleep. She hugged his limp, warm body, slid her fingers through his furry ruff, then set him down on the rag rug beside the cot. He yawned and stretched and blinked amber eyes before springing up to his favorite place on the parapet overlooking the beach front below. As Jan lifted the top blanket to snuggle it, she noted it was plentifully decorated with Neptune's silky hair.

"So this is where he spends his nights," she said, wondering if Derek petted him. She must ask sometime, for Neptune, outwardly true-blue, paying no heed to anyone when his mistress was about, might be secretly cheating. And if he were, she smiled, the person sharing his love must be the right sort.

The little tent smelled of cigarettes and soap and clean masculinity. Pausing when the bed-making was done, Jan suddenly dropped onto the rough army blanket and laid her cheek against Derek's pillow. As if this act, accomplished in a joining together of memory, she closed her eyes and warmed herself by thinking of how Derek looked when he swung off to work this morning. Burned to the color of coffee, inured to beating sun, he now wore only a pair of blue jeans, sneakers, and a jaunty officer's cap. From his waist to his flaming hair he was as evenly brown as if he'd been painted by a spray gun. Also, he'd picked up an astounding vocabulary of fisherman's lingo and delighted in trying it out on her at breakfast when they had the kitchen to themselves.

A great deal of the bitterness had gone out of his talk and manner. A few days ago he'd asked her to play for him and he'd listened without growing dark and fierce and violent. Timidly she urged him to play. He refused, but his refusal was only a shrug, no outburst of words. Encouraged, she asked, "Just what do you harbor against Chopin? You said once you couldn't bear him."

"I can't. His music hurts me, haunts me. I lived a long time ago only to perfect myself in the playing of his Polonaise in A Flat Major."

"I'm A Misfit"

ANOTHER time, setting his teeth into his favorite subject, the chaos and hopelessness of the world, the growing decadence of civilization, she had checked him with:

"Derek, it's the misfits who rant on soap boxes. Busy people, happy people, useful people, haven't the time nor the desire to tell the world how lousy it is."

"He'd thought a while. Then: 'Maybe you've got something there, Jan. I'm a misfit if there ever was one! But it isn't my fault.'"

"Perhaps not, but if you keep on being a misfit it's certainly your fault."

"Is this fitting in, then? This existing to eat and sleep and labor with my hands?"

"You can look out of your tent at night and see the stars," she said. "You can watch the sunrise and sunset and look at that ocean out there and realize how little and unimportant you are. You can dream."

"Philosophy is cold. Y'know, Jan, it's a funny thing—I hate the idea of manual labor, but I—I like it. It does something to me. Something good, genuine, earthy. I'm earning my salt and incidentally my own self-respect. Lord, I sound like an Horatio Alger hero!"

Lying on his cot, relaxed, feeling the salt breeze fan his skin, thoughts and words all ran together, blurring. With a sigh she poked her nose over the edge of the pillow and fell into sound sleep.

Derek, stealing guiltily through the house two hours later, thinking he had escaped detection, found her there. One arm was crooked under her head, the other dangled off the edge of the cot. Small and childish and defenseless she seemed in sleep. Her lashes lay thick and dusky against her soft golden cheek; her sensitively-curved pink lips pouted with dreams; her hair spouted yellow over the pillow.

His eyes, watching so intently, woke her. "I must have fallen asleep," she murmured drowsily, sitting up, rubbing her temples. Then she had a good look at him. A small shriek escaped her.

"Derek! For heaven's sake, what happened to you?"

He grinned and hung his head a little while she stared, terrified. For one eye was turning black and swelling shut, a good-sized lump distorted his jaw, and there was blood on his cheek.

"It was a swell fight," he declared. "But, Jan, Cap fired me."

"Tell me all," she ordered. "I'll bet you started the fight."

"Well, I was helping a guy pull in a whopping big barracuda and Cap grabbed the pole away from me and hollered I didn't know anything and never would and if it weren't for you he'd knock the daylight out of me and toss me overboard!"

"Oh, Derek, you didn't hit him?"

"No, I didn't hit him, but I burned up and told him a few things about his rotten old tubs and the first mate got in on it—he's always hated me, anyhow—and then a couple of other fellows took sides and it turned into a free-for-all," he related. "Gosh, it was fun. I feel glorious! I haven't had a fist fight for years!"

It's You!
If you want to work for the kind of a firm like the kind of a firm you like, You needn't slip your clothes in a grip or start on a job-hunting hike.

You'll only find what you left behind for there's nothing that's really new.

It's a knock at yourself when you knock your boss, it isn't the firm... it's you.

No company's made by men who are afraid lest somebody else gets ahead.

When everyone works and nobody shirks you can bring back a business that's dead.

And if while you make your personal stake your fellows can make one, too.

Your firm will be what you want it to be..... it isn't the firm... it's you.

Visitor (To oldest inhabitant)—That's a fine old axe.

Oldest Inhabitant—Yes, sir, that axe is 95 years old. I had it when I was a baby.

Visitor—It looks as good as new.

Oldest Inhabitant (thoughtfully)—Well, it's had three new blades and seven new handles but excepting that, it's just the same, sir.

Large numbers of people are demanding to know why the country doesn't go ahead. We wouldn't know, unless its because it is going backward.

There's a latent hankering in all of us to become, in one way or another, somebody's guardian. If you have it, suppress it. Let other people take care of their affairs. Take them on yourself and they'll soon be hating you.

Figure this out yourself: Mrs. Hawkins—Do you put away your winter clothes in camphor balls to keep the moths away?

Mr. Dempsey—No, I usually put them up with three gold balls to keep the wolf away.

"In Conference" The saddest words to salesmen's ears.

Are those of daily circumstances. His face they age beyond his years.

"I'm sorry, he's in conference."

Wife—How can I drive a nail without hitting my fingers?

Husband—Hold the hammer in both hands.

The man who gets the idea that he is a big shot is often the first to get fired.

City Girl—What is this stuff I've just picked?

Country Boy—Wow! That's poison ivy!

City Girl—Well, don't get so excited. I'm not going to eat it.

Just because you can't see those hidden taxes, don't conclude that your sight is bad.

Teacher—Who can tell me which pine has the longest and sharpest needles?

Pupil—The porcu.

You don't have to know HOW to sing, its feeling as though you want to, that makes the day a successful one.

Perhaps this was intended as a slam: Plumber's Wife (as she kissed him goodbye)—By the way, dear bring me a pound of sausages when you come back for whatever it is you've forgotten.

So Don't Worry

Sacramento, Calif. (P) — The coat mundi, a predatory little animal that scientists have known was spreading out from its Mexican habitat, has now been definitely identified in California. The state division of fish and game described the newcomer as about the size of a raccoon and living on either fruit or flesh.

under the name of "Pride of North," when grown under identical conditions proved to be widely different in season and in productivity. Some were just a large, late, yellow dent corn from the west or south which did not mature and had barely formed ears before frost.

"No farmer can afford to take chances with seed corn unless he knows exactly what variety it is and what that variety will do for him on his farm, and this information can readily be secured from thoroughly reliable sources," concludes Prof. Munn. "There is no excuse this year if anyone takes a chance on beautiful golden yellow seed corn which may be disguised as a 'gold brick,' yet proves to be a costly investment."

Warns Farmers on Seed Corn Stocks

Geneva, N. Y.—Results of control field trials of 188 stocks of seed corn offered for sale in the open market last spring lead seed specialists at the State Experiment Station here to warn farmers against buying "gold bricks" in the form of seed corn for this year's planting. Of these 188 stocks, 61 were offered under different names which were entirely meaningless so far as the field results were concerned. "Before the corn kernels go down through the planter is the time to consider carefully whether these little yellow nuggets will 'pay-off' in the fall," is the way that Prof. M. T. Munn, head of the seed testing laboratory, put it.

"Some farmers may believe that 'corn is corn,' but when the different stocks of seed corn now offered on the market are grown side by side in the same field it is plain to see that they are vastly different in performance," he continues, adding that, "The 188 stocks of field corn planted here at the Station proved more disappointing than any other farm crop so far tested. Of course there were some excellent seed stocks among the lot which proved to be genuine gold bricks. This was particularly true of the few standard recommended varieties and especially so of the new hybrids which are just being offered and whose merits are recognized, but here again the farmer must be on his guard and make certain that he gets a hybrid adapted to his local conditions."

The trials showed that many of the seed corn stocks were a serious detriment to the farmer who planted them. Twenty stocks sold under the name of "Leaming," and nearly as many offered

Officials Are in Quandry
Washington, May 31 (AP).—Capitol officials are in a quandary over a location for Howard Chandler Christy's new painting, "The Signing of the Constitution." The law which authorized $30,000 for its completion specified that it must hang in the Capitol. The canvas is 20 feet by 30 feet. There are only four spaces in the building big enough for it—and each of them already has a painting. The picture probably will go into one of those four spots, however. It is temporarily in the rotunda.

To Hold Clinic
The Middletown State Homeopathic Hospital will hold mental clinics in Kingston on Fridays, June 7 and 21, in the board of health clinic rooms, 27 East O'Reilly street, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Patients on parole from the hospital are requested to report on the day to which they were assigned. Advice will be given persons desiring to consult the clinic physician about their own condition or that of a relative or friend.

Army Equipped For Air Defense

Artillery Range Improved, Anti-Tank Guns Made More Effective.

WASHINGTON. — The United States army is gradually completing the reorganization and modernization of its equipment, speeded up as a result of the European war.

One of the most important lessons of the war is the necessity for increased air defense, and the army is meeting this by producing larger numbers of present models of anti-aircraft guns, and developing new weapons with which to ward off air attacks.

The new Garand rifle, of which the army has about 30,000, gives troops increased protection against low flying aircraft when machine-gunning concentrations. The increased firepower of the semi-automatic machine gun is expected to prove an effective defense against such tactics.

Anti-Aircraft Machine Guns.

The troops are also protected by anti-aircraft machine guns of .30 and .50 millimeter caliber, which have been steadily improved, and with newly developed sights are able to operate effectively over a range of 3,000 yards against fast, low flying planes.

In addition to these types of weapons, which have been in the army's possession for some time, though continually being improved, the army is beginning to get its first orders of 37 millimeter anti-aircraft guns. Firing a 1½ pound shell at a rate of 125 rounds a minute, the projectile has an explosive charge which bursts on striking any part of the plane.

The army also has two larger type guns for its anti-aircraft defenses, the three-inch batteries, of which it has a considerable number, with more on order, and the new 90-millimeter gun, which has just been developed. The new army budget provides for the construction of 100 of the 90-millimeter guns, which will have a far greater range than the 20,000-foot altitude of the three-inch type.

Europe Watched Closely.
American army officers are watching closely the developments in Europe to see how effective anti-aircraft defenses will prove against bombers. They point out that thus far there has been no decisive test of any such defenses, and that while it is probable no defense can ever be perfected to permit the complete defeat of a raid, if the cost of the raids is increased to a high percentage the heavy costs of anti-aircraft defenses will be well repaid.

In order to co-ordinate the use of these arms in its air defense, the war department recently set up an air defense command which includes not only all the fixed anti-aircraft units, squadrons of pursuit and interceptor planes and the signal corps service, but also the mobile anti-aircraft artillery regiments now scattered throughout the United States.

Meanwhile the reorganization of other branches of the army is being carried out as rapidly as possible.

Assessor Finds Dogs Are Worth More Than Jewels

LINCOLN, NEB.—Dogs are more valuable than jewelry, diamonds, clocks and watches in Nebraska, a check of assessment records in Tax Commissioner W. H. Smith's office disclosed.

The total 1939 valuation of dogs was $1,148,290, compared with $1,108,373 for jewels and timepieces. Jewelry and diamonds were valued at $734,040, clocks and watches at $369,333.

With $10 taken as the average value per animal, there were 114,829 dogs listed by assessors last year. The average value of dogs, meanwhile, was only $8.88.

Pupils' Safety Record

Spotless for Ten Years
BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.—A 10-year safety record in which no Bakersfield child has been killed by an automobile while the child was a pedestrian or riding a bicycle was revealed at a meeting of the city board of education.

The significance of the record gained added emphasis when it was pointed out there are 6,000 children in Bakersfield between the ages of 5 and 15 going to and from schools daily and that during the 10 years prior to 1940 records showed 24,000 children have been killed in the United States.

War Fails to Disrupt Hunt for Autographs

LONDON.—A Rumanian journalist who has interviewed and collected the autographs of 1,500 famous men has arrived in England with the idea of adding 21 British winners of the Nobel prize to his collection.

He is S. Horschover and there are few celebrities with whom he is not acquainted. His autograph book contains the signatures of three kings—Gustav of Sweden, Christian of Denmark and Zog of Albania, a score of musicians, statesmen and authors.

Since Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone in his attic workshop in 1875, over 105 types of transmitters have been designed and discarded as newer and better ones have been produced. In recent years two nickel alloys, alnico and permalloy, both products of metallurgical laboratories, have been outstanding contributors to the development of the modern hand telephone set.

Unanimous Verdict

Spartanburg, S. C.—After announcing he had excused a juror because he "has a boil," Circuit Judge Thomas S. Sease said: "The doctor tells me another member of the jury has the mumps, but he's here. You gentlemen don't want him here, do you?"
A chorus of vociferous "noes" rang out.
The man with the mumps was excused.

Round Trip

Pittsburgh—The census taker ran into a travelogue at the home of Mrs. Joseph F. Barron Jr. She said she was born in New York and her husband in Pittsburgh; her boy in New York and her girl in Pittsburgh, and then: "Where is your husband employed?"
"Between Pittsburgh and New York."

Indian Giver

Salt Lake City—Someone from a local garage phoned the fire department to pick up a fire extinguisher which had been lying on the sidewalk in front of the company's building several days. Then someone from the same firm telephoned the fire department to bring back the extinguisher. It belonged to the company and had been set outside for a refill and forgotten.

Hometown Heroine

Head of an electric company now, Price earned the dollar 54 years ago in Chicago.

Foot Trouble

Chicago—Police, thinking they were on the right track when they found 27 shoes in an alley, footed it to Nate Welans, a wholesale shoe merchant, who had reported the theft of 27 shoes from his home. But they were left in the lurch.
Welans's missing shoes were all for the right foot. Those the police found were all lefts.

The Bible class of the Reformed Sunday school, Mrs. D. D. Haines, teacher, collected gifts for a sunshine basket for Miss Mary Terwilliger, and took it to her last Saturday. A bushel basket was packed with gifts, one for each day, from 26 of her many friends. Miss Terwilliger is one of the teachers of the Sunday school. While she is improving she still has to lie in bed and appreciates greatly the kindness of her friends in trying to add cheer to her shut-in days.

Bergan Dismisses 4 Actions Against Lackawack Board

New York the claim should be filed against the City of New York and not against the officers of the city. "These special officers incur no such individual or representative liability on behalf of the city and the remedy must be pursued directly against the municipal corporation as such." Richard Misner claimed to have been employed as a farm manager on the premises of Ward Dierfeller on the Delaware Section 8 proceedings and he sought compensation for six months wages amounting to $751.30 on the theory that when the property upon which he was employed was taken by the city he lost his employment. Under the Administrative Code of the City of New York a claim may be filed against the city where a person who has been steadily employed is deprived of his work and is unable to get work following the taking of property which deprives him or her of a job.

Charles O'Connell claims to have been employed on the property formerly occupied by Frank Patruno as a janitor, handyman and watchman and sought $468. Werner Koons sought to recover the sum of $890.00 claiming that he had been a bartender for Frank Patruno.

Grace Clark sought to recover six months wages in the sum of $957.60 claiming that she too was employed by Frank Patruno and has lost her job. When the city acquired the Patruno property she claims her work ceased.

Morgenthau Says Treasury Facing End of Borrowing

to make it $48,000,000,000, he asserted: "The orderly financing of federal expenditures, expanded as they are by emergency expenditures for national defense, requires provision of additional taxes or an increase in the limit on the national debt."

"In my judgment both steps are essential."

Public Willing and Ready
The treasury secretary declared that he was "convinced that the public is willing and ready to accept the personal sacrifices of paying the additional taxes that are necessary to provide the country with adequate national defense."

Morgenthau said that President Roosevelt's budget message of January 3 anticipated a deficit of $1,716,000,000 to be financed by borrowing.

"Since that time," he added, "events have taken place that make necessary expenditures for national defense that far exceed the amounts provided for in the 1941 budget."

"On the basis of appropriation bills which have passed and those which are now pending in Congress, the treasury and the bureau of the budget estimate that a deficit of the fiscal year 1941 will amount to $3,703,000,000."

Just before Morgenthau commenced testimony as the first witness on the revenue measure, Chairman Doughton (D-N. C.) of the House ways and means committee expressed belief that the bill increasing corporate and individual income taxes 10 per cent and also boosting excise levies, would not "unduly or seriously" burden business.

Doughton asserted that at a later date the committee would consider "a complete revision" of tax laws.

As detailed study of the $3,000,000,000 defense tax bill began in the House, administrative leaders virtually abandoned hope that Congress could adjourn by June 15—their one-time deadline.

Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) said that it "will be July 1 or after" before the members get away. House Leader Rayburn (D-Texas) expressed the opinion that the combined defense and tax programs could be enacted by June 22.

'Naughty Marietta' Meets Old Friend After 36 Years

Back in the golden days when some of America's best music was virtually pouring from the soul of Victor Herbert, a little girl with a voice hummed and sang the melodies which were then sweeping the nation.

Often this girl, whose name then was Marianna Wilde, would sing for her uncle, John Peter Graff, who was then chef at the old Waldorf Hotel. The latter was a friend of the great composer and introduced his niece to him.

Mr. Herbert, whenever he had an opportunity, had Marianna sing for him and these opportunities came many times, despite the busy days of this outstanding creator of music.

Recently as Mrs. Joseph Munier, Marianna, who now lives just outside of Kingston, near Lake Katrine, sang "The Glow Worm" on the Catskill broadcast of the local radio station.

This broadcast was heard by Pierre Florey, who was then visiting friends at Newburgh and the story from then on is perhaps best told in the words of a recent letter to The Freeman by Mr. Florey:

"The letter explains at its opening that 'Mrs. Joseph Munier of Lake Katrine, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Florey at a farewell dinner in the Hotel Pierre and at a friend's home at Morning-side Park, New York on May 23. Mr. Florey is going to make his home in Montreal with his son."

"It was back in 1904," Mr. Florey continues in his letter, "that I saw Mrs. Munier, who was then Marianna Wilde. On March 17 last, I was with friends in Newburgh and heard a Mrs. Munier from Lake Katrine sing the 'Glow Worm' over Kingston's new radio station."

"I remarked to friends, 'that lady sings like a girl I knew away back in 1904.' I knew she was married to a Mr. Munier, so I had my granddaughter look up Mrs. Munier, and she was the girl I wanted to see."

"I am 82 years old and was a violin-cellist in Victor Herbert's orchestra. He was the best composer of comic opera. We both were in Germany for our musical education. I was born in Strasbourg, Alsace-Lorraine and Mr. Herbert in Dublin, Ireland."

"We used to spend our time in New York city after Mr. Herbert and I stayed with friends, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Graff (Mr. Graff was then chef in the old Waldorf Hotel). Mrs. Graff was a singing teacher. They had no children, but they had a little niece, Marianna Wilde, staying with them. She was a girl of about 14 years old and her aunt gave her singing lessons and Mr. Herbert taught her all his comic operas, and boy could she sing them."

"She sang with his orchestra many times and Mr. Herbert was so pleased he presented her with a gold watch and chain, and she will not part with that keepsake."

"Mr. Herbert would also call her 'Naughty Marietta'."

"Mrs. Munier sang the 'Glow Worm' again for our guests at Mr. Paul La Rue's home on Morning-side Park on May 23. She also sang: 'Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life,' from 'Naughty Marietta,' by Herbert and Young, 'Gypsy Love Song,' from 'The Fortune Teller,' by Herbert and Smith, 'Kiss Me Again,' from 'Mlle Modiste,' by Herbert and Blossom, 'A Kiss in the Dark,' by Herbert and DeSylva, and the last song in German, 'The Linden Tree,' by Franz Schubert."

"Mr. Herbert and myself carved our names in the linden tree away back in 1899 and Mr. Herbert loved to hear 'Naughty Marietta' sing it in German."

Mrs. Munier told a reporter recently that she did not continue with her singing as a career because her parents were opposed to the idea.

"It seems amazing to me how quickly young people like Deana Durbin and others get ahead with careers these days," she said.

"She was then asked if she had seen the motion picture dealing with the life of Victor Herbert and she answered:

"Yes I went to see it, but I couldn't stay in the theatre. It brought back memories and it made me feel too filled up inside."

Mrs. Munier sang for "the boys" when they came home from France and with her then was the famous Nora Bayes and her unsurpassed interpretation of "Harvest Moon."

ambitious circles that Japan should take over control of the islands before the end of the war in order to forestall whatever results a peace might bring.

These quarters doubt the United States would intervene and consider no other nation capable of action.

Official quarters insist the government has not changed its policy of non-involvement, has formulated no concrete plan concerning the Indies, and instead will await developments in Europe.

Navy Will Launch New Battlecraft

The record appropriation for the sea forces now before Congress includes more than $100,000,000 to be expended solely to speed the transformation of steel into battlecraft at a rate never even contemplated until the latest emergency arose.

As fast as the fleet reinforcements slide down the ways at more than a dozen crowded shipyards, keels for other craft will take their place.

Two weeks hence the Washington's twin-sister, the U. S. S. North Carolina, under construction at the New York Navy Yard for two and a half years, is to be launched. Other vessels to be launched or completed this year are destroyers and auxiliaries.

Despite the new pressure for speed, the two battleships will not be ready to take their places with the fleet for more than a year. Nevertheless, day and night work will save months in their completion and in the building of the six additional battleships already laid down or soon to be under construction.

Work is well under way on the four other 35,000-ton battleships, and materials are being assembled for the 45,000-ton U. S. S. Iowa and U. S. S. New Jersey whose keels are to be laid this fall or earlier at New York and Philadelphia, respectively.

Shady Man Pays $10
Eugene Howland, 21, of Shady, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving when arraigned before Justice Wallace Shultis at 9 o'clock Thursday night. He paid a fine of $10. Deputy Sheriff Ray Winne, who with Deputy George Reynolds arrested Howland, said that the latter was driving at the rate of 70 miles an hour and passed on a turn near the Bears-ville bridge at about that clip.

THE "NEVER-FAIL" FLOUR WITH THE MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Harris Brown's 28th Anniversary

Twenty-eight years ago Harris Brown left Albany in a E. M. F. Flanders car with 32 by 3½ inch clincher tires to drive to Kingston to establish Kingston's pioneer tire business. That was on June 1, 1912 and today Mr. Brown laughed over that trip but he was in anything but a laughing mood that day.

From Albany to Kingston, a distance of 57 miles, he had five punctures and six blowouts before he arrived in Kingston nine hours after the start. But on that same day he opened a tire shop on Downs street in Kingston.

In celebrating his 28th anniversary during the week of June 1 to 8, Mr. Brown not only celebrates that anniversary as a tire dealer but as a pioneer in the automotive industry.

Mr. Brown's background and early training goes back even further than 1912 when he came to Kingston, and his early training was ideal for servicing tires. His tire experience goes back to 1905 when he started in the vulcanizing business at the Albany Vulcanizing Works in Albany with his two brothers, Joe and Jake, who are still in business in that city selling U. S. tires.

Learning the trade of vulcanizing gave him a first start, for vulcanizing was then an important part of the retail tire business. The first place of business here was known as Brown's Vulcanizing Works and later he changed it to Brown's Tire Company and at present it is Brown's Servicenter, Inc., on Broadway opposite the Central post-office.

When Brown opened his first store here, tires were far inferior to the present day product and even repair service was not so efficient. At first Brown's slogan was "Brown Sells Goods Tires". When manufacturers began to make a better product he changed that to "If It's Tires, See Brown".

From that first small shop on Downs street he moved to larger quarters at 622 Broadway and continued his business there for several years until larger quarters were needed, and he moved to the Servicenter in the former American Cigar Factory building on central Broadway. As his business grew he became wholesaler and jobber and several years ago became jobber and retail distributor for U. S. tires. He now operates a complete 24 hour service station.

Mr. Brown is not only known in the tire business where his experiences go back to the infancy of the motor car but likewise in boxing circles. When he was learning the vulcanizing business in Albany in his young years, he also learned boxing and became one of the fast-stepping boys of squared circle. His admirers gave him the nickname of "K. O. Brown" and he fought a considerable number of professional battles. Although retired from the ring for many years he is still actively interested in all kinds of sports.

Dr. Henry C. Sherman, noted authority on nutrition, of Columbia University, says:

"In no other way can the food habits now prevailing be so certainly and economically improved as by a more liberal use of good milk."

BLONDIE

A LUCKY MASCOT

Why not satisfy that itch to be "tops"?

Buick prices begin at $895* for Business Coupe (Illustrated)

It happens to the best of us. We all like to step out in something a little finer, a little smarter, a bit more able, than the other fellow has.

So when you can do that—and get a better buy in the bargain—why not step right up to the head of the class?

Just look around you. Can you name a sleeker, trimmer, neater, smarter-looking car than this 1940 Buick?

Do you see anything on the road that can keep pace with its husky, valve-in-head straight-eight engine—Dynaflex patterned for thrift, and electrically balanced after assembly to brand-new smoothness?

Ever see anything slicker than the way its soft, rear coil springs float the body serenely along, even though the wheels be dancing?

Dig into the tangible things that make value—you won't find a bigger car anywhere at its price, measured bumper to bumper, nor one with a frame as heavy and stout.

ed by their own life and drum corps and large delegations from the various troops in the city and vicinity.

The crack drum corps of Kingston Post of the American Legion headed the members of the Post who turned out in large numbers, and one of the most pleasing sights in the parade was the appearance of the recently organized Sons of the Legion drum corps, who marched and played like veterans.

The only band in the parade was the Salvation Army Band, which headed a large delegation of Army workers.

The famous Rock School drum corps also participated in the parade and as usual came in for hearty applause along the line of march. The 4-H Clubs of the county were largely represented by boys and girls and were applauded.

Tappen Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, Pratt Post, G. A. R., and Augustus Cole, 95-year-old veteran of the Civil War, who was the guest of honor of the parade, together with Gold Star Mothers, who rode in cars, marched in the second division, as did members of Company "M" Veterans Association, Colonial Camp, Spanish War Veterans, the Women's Auxiliary of the Sons of Union Veterans, Joyce-Schrick Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of Kingston Post.

Members of Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., rode in automobiles, as did members of the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The members of the Community Riding Club on horseback brought the colorful parade to a pleasing close.

After days of cloudy and rainy weather, Memorial Day broke bright and clear with the sun shining overhead. It was an ideal day for a parade, both for those taking part and those who turned out to watch it pass.

Long before 11 o'clock, the hour for the parade to move, thousands began to assemble along the line of march. The gay colors of the clothes worn by the girls and women who viewed the parade, and the sparkling uniforms of the girls and women in the parade added a colorful touch to the day's ceremonies.

While thousands thronged the sidewalks many viewed the parade from their parked automobiles which lined Broadway from the intersection of Albany avenue to Delaware avenue, where the parade disbanded.

The parade formed at Pearl street and Clinton avenue and moved on down Broadway to Delaware avenue. The ideal weather that prevailed while the parade was in progress continued throughout the entire day and evening.

Women and children refugees are being crushed by modern war machines. Help them through your contribution to the Red Cross War Relief Fund.

Views at Memorial Day Parade

One of the most colorful Memorial Day parades in the history of Kingston passed through the city's streets on Thursday morning. Several views of the parade were taken by The Freeman photographer. Upper left shows Co. M, 10th Infantry, 1917-18 marching past Central Postoffice; the picture below shows the officers of the 156th Field Artillery riding in an auto; while below is a view of Augustus Cole, 95-year-old survivor of the Civil War riding in the back seat of an auto, carrying an American flag, while below is shown the trucks of the 156th Field Artillery. Children were well represented in the parade and the picture on the right shows members of the various 4-H Clubs marching in the parade, while the picture below shows the members of the Community Riding Club who brought the parade to a colorful close.

Played Taps at Cemetery
Chairman William F. Jordan and Assistant Chairman Harry M. Kingsburg marched the Sons of Legion Drum and Bugle Corps from the Legion Memorial Building to Montrose cemetery where flags were lowered at half mast and Taps were sounded. The chaplain, Henry L. Kingsburg, said prayers for Louis Kaplan, late son of Harry Kaplan. A wreath was placed upon the grave.

Buley Cut in Two By Freight Train

Twenty minutes after he had reported for duty in the east-bound classification yard of the New Haven railroad in Maybrook on Tuesday afternoon, Virgil Buley, 57, of East Maybrook, a railroad brakeman for more than a quarter of a century, was instantly killed when he fell on the track and was cut into two by the first car of a string of 19 loaded freight cars.

Members of the train crew were not immediately aware of the accident. When Buley failed to appear, a search party was organized. The body was found 2,000 feet from the point where the train had stopped.

Buley was lying on his back with the upper half of his body between the rails and the lower half outside the track.

Born in the town of Olive, Mr. Buley was the son of the late Wesley and Sandusky Hogan Buley. He had lived in Maybrook for many years and was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 813, and the Maybrook Baptist Church.

Survivors are his widow, Daisy Buley, a daughter, Mrs. Douglas Bennett of Walden; three brothers, Lorian Buley of Coldbrook; Alvah of Shokan, and William of Maybrook; and a sister, Mrs. Lester Abbott of Kent, Conn. Mr. Buley was 57 years old.

Funeral services were held this afternoon with burial in the Woodstock rural cemetery.

How many British died in the Cassel pocket no one knew. How many men still fought in all the Flanders zone no one knew; but original estimates for the Germans have ranged from 440,000 to 600,000 and for the Allies from 300,000 to a half-million or more.

SOUTH AMERICAN HURT IN SPEEDWAY CRASH

Paul Reganti, South American driver, was injured when his car hit a wall in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis. His wrecked racer lies at the left, while skid marks show how it swerved across the track and through fence in foreground.

150 Racers May Compete Here in Kingston Regatta

Over 150 entry blanks are being mailed to outstanding out-board drivers scattered over seven states of the east, for the third annual regatta being sponsored by the Kingston Power Boat Association for July 7 on the Rondout creek. These racers comprise five classes of racing in this hazardous sport, namely, A, B, C, F and runabouts.

Among the famous pilots who are expected to perform on July 7 are Harold Kennedy of Pearl River, N. Y., who won the feature event at last year's regatta; Fred Abbott, of Yonkers, who put on the great exhibition of speed last year but was eliminated from the Class F event due to his crack-up with Joe White of Poughkeepsie in the first heat; Dick Waldron of Schenectady, whose classy boat "Hats Off," took both heats of tirunabout race and the prize for the best appearing outfit among the 50 boats present. Many beautiful prizes including trophies and boating equipment will be secured for the regatta.

There is a possibility that a special "thrill" event will be on the program, a 15-mile marathon "free-for-all" run over a longer course than the other events. Plans for this added attraction are still incomplete.

Wounds, fright, and hunger are killing innocent women and children. Your contribution is needed for the American Red Cross War Relief Fund.

Glider Meet Opened at Wurtsboro Thursday

Wurtsboro, May 30 — Fair weather conditions prevailed here yesterday as the Eastern States Soaring Association's four-day glider meet opened.

At least 50 pilots of the graceful, motorless craft were expected to compete in the gliding contest which is being held on the 75-acre Wurtsboro airport.

Host to visiting fliers is the Hudson Valley Glider Club whose headquarters is Helm Acres, near the airport.

Edward A. Quarterman, club secretary and contest chairman, reported that the field was in good shape and that many of the early arrivals were taking advantage of weather conditions for practice flights beginning at noon.

Besides Quarterman, officers of the Hudson Valley Club are: Herbert Sargent, Jr., Jersey City, president; Atlee Houck, Elmira, vice-president; William Price, Jersey City, treasurer.

Herbert Sargent, Sr., also of Jersey City, is official timer and recorder.

Among those who had set up ships and were taking trial runs early yesterday afternoon were: Alan Davis and John Davis of Boston; Arvin Yates, Ossining; Frank Schellhorn, Stratford, Conn.; Herbert Sargent, Jr.; Franklin Hurt, Jersey City; John Wolbarst, New York City; William Price; Edward A. Quarterman.

The fatal crash in which Miss

Dorothy Crabtree of Summit Center, Rutherford, N. J., met death in the plane piloted by Herbert Sargent Jr., at the Wurtsboro airport late Thursday cast a shadow of gloom among the flying fraternity which had gathered to compete in the colorful sport.

Smoothing out of small details which have delayed the start of the flying boat service from New Zealand to Sydney is being effected in New Zealand now.

Eye-Witnesses Tell How Refugees Balked Soldiers

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.

Bern, Switzerland, May 31 (AP)—Clogging of vital Allied roads with millions of refugees and the efficiency of Germany's military machine in keeping its own supply routes unobstructed defeated the Allies in the north, eye-witnesses returning from the war zone declared today.

One said the morale-shattering presence of masses of refugees in areas where the Belgian army was being "cut to bits" by the Nazi aerial and land assault accounted in part for surrender of King Leopold III.

Seven eye-witnesses, who came here through Germany after being caught in the midst of fighting in four different zones of western and southern Belgium and northern France, agreed on contrasting these pictures:

Chaos of the streams of refugees and non-combatants, flowing with all their movable possessions into roads essential to Allied communications.

"Incredible" orderliness in the rush of German supplies over highways leading to the front.

Among Eye-Witnesses

The eye-witnesses, who declined to be named, included four diplomats, two businessmen and "just a tourist." Four were more or less pro-Ally, the others equally pro-German. All praised the courtesy and treatment accorded them by the Germans once it was decided they should pass through the military zone.

One gave this description of the scene along the Calais-Abbeville coast road in northern France last Wednesday:

"We swarmed along the coast road with tens of thousands of other refugees heading south. Swearing and sweating French troops in motorized units tried to go through northward, but the refugees were panic-stricken and there was little the troops could do."

"I saw one group of refugees stand like sheep—dazed and bewildered—and halt a whole column of tanks at least 10 minutes before they literally were led off the road."

"German planes bombed and machine-gunned these roads, for they saw moving, organized columns of troops."

Incredible Organization

A diplomat who traveled through German-occupied regions from Amiens to Luxembourg asserted that "after the chaos we left (in France), the order on the German side seemed incredible. Supplies not only were moving up—they were rushing up at break-neck speed over unobstructed highways."

Ambulances rolled toward Amiens, empty trucks and full ambulances headed back. The middle lane, by strict order which was followed to the letter, was left open for motorcycle couriers. "Yet that same road the day before was like a madhouse we left."

"The Germans seemed to have plenty of gasoline, their morale was high and the organization almost fantastic."

This witness (pro-Ally) added that "we neither saw nor heard a single Allied bomber over the main highways just behind the front either day or night."

One who left the Belgian northern war zone the day King Leopold capitulated declared that "nobody who was there could wonder why."

"The Belgian army was cut to bits," this witness said. "Whole regiments simply vanished under German fire the day before the surrender."

"Even that was not enough to bring surrender, but the troops' morale was shattered by the presence of masses of refugees literally on the army's skirts."

"German bombers striking at Belgian supply lines struck refugees too—Belgian refugees."

"Many Belgian soldiers seemed stark mad—torn between the desire to continue the fight and the inability to avoid German fire on refugees who shared their camps."

Another witness who travelled the road between Arras and Cambrai in northeastern France Wednesday said:

"Refugees and soldiers lay side by side along the road in death."

"Our column of refugees (they then were in German-occupied territory) captured the night before) flowed up to a place where we saw a well-dressed businessman standing in front of his car in a ditch, looking under the raised hood. I ran out to see if I could help him. Like others on the ground around him, he was stiff in death."

Settlement in Qualtere Action

The May trial term of Supreme Court which has been in session for the past four weeks was recessed Wednesday afternoon until June 19 when the Grand Jury report will be made.

A verdict of $70 for plaintiff was returned in the action brought by Nathan Rosenblatt against Hyman Zisser. Plaintiff claimed money due him for work, labor and services which he performed at the Saugerties dress factory of the defendant. Morris Rosenblum appeared for plaintiff.

Settlement was also announced in the action brought by Thomas Qualtere against Anthony Qualtere and another, as executors, etc. This was an action on the preferred calendar brought by the aged Mr. Qualtere to recover certain property which he gave to members of his family and later sought to have returned.

Model Engineers Host to Brooklyn

Members of the Brooklyn Railroad Club, operators of the quarter-inch scale "Dunwood Western Lines," made their annual visit to the Kingston Model Railroad Club Thursday.

Arriving at noon, the model engineers from the metropolitan area enjoyed themselves for six hours—operating the "Hudson Valley Lines," (quarter-inch scale railroad system of the local club), taking snap-shots and motion pictures of activity within the club and about the yards of the West Shore Railroad, and discussing various ideas connected with the hobby of model railroading.

It was the Brooklyn Club which supplied the basic ideas for the organization of the local club three years ago, and since that time the Brooklyn members have made an annual visit in Kingston.

Those present at Thursday's meeting were James Kline, Oliver N. Carey, Albert Bogert, Edward Day, and Sam Sexton of Brooklyn, August Snell of Middletown, and Addison Schultz, Julius Lipton and Henry P. Eighmey of Kingston.

6,000 C. I. O. Workers Strike At Kearney Ship Plant Today

Kearney, N. J., May 31 (AP)—Six thousand workers struck today, halting work on six warships included in the United States' rush defense program.

Among $46,000,000 in naval contracts held by the company are a cruiser and two destroyers on the ways, two destroyers in the fitting basin, and a cruiser on which only preliminary work had been done.

Also affected by the strike were three cargo vessels and two tankers.

Strikers picketed the plant while their leaders, who had argued against the walkout, negotiated on their behalf with company officials. The men are members of Local 16, Industrial Union of Maritime and Shipworkers of America (CIO).

John Dempsey, local president and national vice president, said he had opposed the strike but now "fully sympathized" with the action taken. The naval work was ahead of schedule and would not suffer, he said.

No Injuries When Cars Collide on Hurley Road

A car owned by John Vanoy, 35 Murray street and driven by James Landerway of 17 West Strand, collided with a car driven by Jack Horner of Kerhonkson about 1:25 this morning. The accident happened near Harford's gas station on the Hurley road. Deputy Sheriff McCullough, who made an investigation, reported no arrests and no personal injuries although both cars were badly damaged.

A tried-and-true style is the dress that buttons down the front. In Pattern 9412, Marian Martin has designed an unusually smart button-front frock for at-home or abroad. The scalloped collar, which may extend into rounded revers, is effective in either self-fabric or becoming contrast perhaps with nicely shaped cuffs to match. You might add a dainty rounded pocket and a belt, and use either ruffling or ric-rac for gay trim. This style is made in just FIVE MAIN PATTERNS PARTS!

Pattern 9412 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 5 yards 35 inch fabric, and 1 1/2 yards ruffling.

Authors Speak At Hurley School

Children in the Hurley school received a treat Wednesday afternoon when they were able to meet personally the authors of some of their favorite books. Latrobe Carroll, Ruth Carroll and Hamilton Williamson, authors of juvenile books, who were visiting in Hurley, spoke to the children on some of their more recent publications. "The Flight of the Silver Bird," a book now being used by modern schools as supplementary readers, and written by Ruth and Latrobe Carroll, was described by the two Carrolls. This book, which is a story about the flight of the China Clipper, contains so many important facts that it was chosen for public school use. The authors explained that the book was written with the help of the Pan-American Air Lines and the United States Navy, whose bases at the island of Guam are now closed because of the war in Europe, and could not be written today.

Ruth Carroll, who is also an artist of repute, told of her book, "Chessie," the cat which received 60,000 fan letters, and "Chessie and Her Kittens." She also intrigued the children with the tale of "The Luck of the Roll and Go," the story of the Jacob Ruppert, the flagship of Admiral Byrd. The illustrations in the latter were made from real huskies that Admiral Byrd took with him on his trip. The book has been printed in four languages.

Latrobe Carroll spoke to the children in the upper grades on "Transportation in the Arctic Circle," while Ruth Carroll illustrated the characters she had met on the trip to the Arctic.

Hamilton Williamson spoke to the lower grade children about the characters in her animal book and Ruth Carroll again helped by illustrating them on the blackboard.

All of the books are on the Junior Literary Approved List and the American Book Association and are among the leading juvenile books suitable for educational purposes.

U. S. Living Conditions

'Type' American Face

Americans are gradually acquiring a new face and features that will probably be the permanent "American face" of the future, according to Grant Wood, well-known artist.

Wood, who is resident-consultant in art at the University of Iowa, has aroused controversy through the United States for such paintings as "Daughters of Revolution," "American Gothic" and "Parson Weems' Fable."

"Facially, at least, Americans have softened up," he said, "until they don't look much like they did in the old untidy days."

"The climate in this country, and the change of thought have changed the look of rigidity in American faces. And I don't know if this is good or not."

"People today look soft compared to the tynite albums. We seem to have wishy-washy complexions."

Wood said that to find models for his "American Gothic," which shows a stern farmer and his wife, with hardly more expression than the pitchfork the farmer holds in his hands, he was obliged to use tynite albums for research before doing the painting that was intended to analyze our "Puritan ancestry."

As to the stiff, upish faces of the women of his controversial explosive painting "Daughters of Revolution," he insists that it was not he who put the word "American" into the title. Others did that.

Kerhonkson Union School Activities

One of the most colorful events of the school year was brought to a close Friday afternoon as the Seniors were awarded the trophy for Moving-Up Day competition. The cup will be inscribed with the Senior names and placed in the trophy case until next year.

Costumes were especially bright. The Seniors wore Uncle Sam costumes with high blue hats and even white beards. The Juniors wore green capes, green hats over white. The Sophomores came dressed as Little Abner and Daisy May. Freshmen members decked themselves in yellow and white and the Junior High School wore costumes of blue and sailor hats. The classes presented an amusing scene as they marched across the lawn to form the letters K. H. S. President William Atkins and Grand Marshal Doris Green expressed their pleasure at the way in which the students handled the exercises.

Student officers for 1940-1941 were announced. President Mary Weigle has served as President of her class, was a member of last year's Student Council and has been very active in social growth activities. Other officers are: Vice-president, Matthew Rauch; secretary, Millard Beuler; treasurer, Amy Terwilliger.

Trip to Fair

The Kappa, athletic honor society of the Kerhonkson High School, will visit the World's Fair Wednesday and Thursday of this week, according to President Herbert Popple. A trip of this kind is an annual affair with the Kappa boys who are looking forward to an instructive as well as entertaining program. The group expects to witness a ball game Thursday afternoon and will return late Thursday night.

Valedictorian Award

The Readers Digest annual reward for scholastic achievement has been won by the valedictorian of the Class of 1940, Miss Margaret Atkins. Each year the Readers Digest presents this reward to young men and women throughout the country, who by successful records in school work give promise of attaining leadership in their communities. Miss Atkins, daughter of Mrs. Mary Atkins of Accord, will receive a certificate of award upon graduation.

State Supervisor's Visit

Raymond Handville, state superintendent of rural guidance, visited the Kerhonkson school last Monday. Mr. Handville was welcomed by Donald C. Fletcher, guidance director, and discussed a program for 1940-1941 which would be of most benefit to the general student body. He also distributed information, which will be of great value to seniors, who are desirous of locating positions for next year.

Examinations

Examinations will be conducted during the week of June 17-21. According to a recent communication from the State Education Department, the examination in elementary geography will contain 40 objective questions instead of 20 as in the past. Pupils will be required to answer all 40 of these. The elementary English examination is also changed as far as the poetry question is concerned. There will no longer be an alternative permitting the pupil to write about poetry that he has read.

The graduation date for the elementary school will be Thursday, June 20, and for the high school Monday, June 24.

Board Meeting

The regular meeting of the Board of Education will be conducted in the high school library Friday, May 31. It is expected that a report on the parking field will be submitted at this time as well as information concerning the finishing of the tennis courts. A new road has been built across one of the lawns to eliminate the danger of accident, which has been present due to cars driving all the way around the school. Under the new plan, cars will not be permitted to go beyond the parking field.

The school has received a communication from the Department of Civil Service concerning the examination for hospital attendant in state and county institutions. Qualifications include the age limits 18 to 45, residents of the state, ability to read and write, English, good physical condition, as well as certain basic skills. Anyone interested may secure further information at the school.

Reunion Postponed

The annual reunion of Ulster County Girl Scouts at Camp Wendy Saturday has been postponed because of the rainy weather. The reunion will be held later in the month.

Old Age Most Prevalent In Canada and Ireland

LONDON.—Unofficial statistics compiled here indicate that those living in Canada and Ireland seem to have the best chance of passing the 90-year mark.

Claude Baker Gabb of London for 25 years has meticulously kept a record of the deaths of persons 90 or over, and Gabb's statistics are quoted all over the world.

"I tabulate the deaths in a little black book every day," he said, "with such details as are given in the Times. At the beginning of each year, I get a column of space in the newspaper for my digest. 'I find old age very prevalent in Canada and Ireland. It is astonishing what a lot of 'over nineties' have been living in those countries.'"

HOW TO GIVE "FRIENDLY INFORMAL" STAND-UP PARTY IN A SMALL HOUSE

Evening at Home With Buffet Suppers Is Suggested for Mother Who Wants Friends to Meet Son's Bride

Above your names on your Mr. and Mrs. visiting cards, you write across the top:

Stand-Up Supper for Mary and John and across the bottom:

May 30th R. s. v. p. 7 o'clock

This invitation would, I believe, create just the feeling of "friendly informality" that this mother asks about (among other things) in the following letter:

"When my son arrives here with his new bride I should like to invite about fifty relatives and family friends to some kind of gathering for the purpose of meeting the new member of our family and to again see our John, who has been away from home for a number of years. John and his Mary will be able to stop with us only a few days, and I thought this would be the best way to have every one see them. But I want above all to have the gathering seem welcoming to Mary. Can you suggest any particular party for this number of people in a house which is not more than average size, and will you please also tell me the best invitation for fifty people, to suggest friendly informality."

In answering this, I am rather in doubt as to the size of your house, but I do know that more than fifty people can be included in a buffet supper without taxing the size of a so-called "small house" of typical modern plan, which has one living-room across the whole house—a room for example, about 14 x 23 feet—with perhaps a wide hall or possibly a sun porch opening out of it. But if your rooms are all very small, then this would be difficult because you wouldn't be able to separate people into small groups of even size in each room. In this case, I think the only thing to do is to have an evening at home, and see that people in the overcrowded room move on into the emptier one.

But since all new house plans have a relatively large living room and many of the older houses have had their typical "parlors" made into one living-room, let us suppose that you will give the buffet supper. This will probably be a "stand-up" supper since your house is really small you will probably not have space for little tables. In other words, guests will have to hold their plates in their hands as they do at all large wedding receptions. If your handwriting is large you might order fifty of your Mr. and Mrs. cards struck off on an especially large card. Personally I think this is much smarter than the fold-over card.) President Submits New Defense Plea to Congress For 'Over Billion Dollars'

Washington, May 31 (AP)—President Roosevelt submitted to Congress today a supplemental emergency defense program, involving "over a billion dollars," and asked for action without delay.

This latest enlargement of the military program is necessitated, Mr. Roosevelt said in a message to the legislators, because of "almost incredible events" in the past two weeks of Europe's war—"particularly as a result of the use of aviation and mechanized equipment."

"No individual, no group can clearly foretell the future," the Chief Executive asserted. "As long, however, as a possibility exists that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain."

The one most obvious lesson taught by the conflict raging overseas, Mr. Roosevelt said, "is the value of the factor of speed."

Joseph D. Rafferty died at his home, 6 Cottage Row this morning after a protracted illness. Mr. Rafferty was born in this city and resided here all his life. For many years he was employed by the Cornell Steamboat Co. Not only was he very well known in this vicinity but also along the waterways between Buffalo and New York city. Commodities Were Higher Wednesday

The better tone showed by the market toward the close on Tuesday, following the slump in the first hour, cutting early losses about half, continued in the pre-holiday session on Wednesday. Volume was 660,000 vs. 1,260,000 on Tuesday and all classes of stocks in the Dow-Jones averages closed the day with substantial gains. The industrial averages was up .98 point for the day, to 115.24; rails advanced .40, to 23.22 and utilities were ahead .49 to close at 18.80.

Commodities moved generally higher Wednesday, in sympathy with the better tone of securities and firmness in grains. Wheat closed 1/4 to 1/2 higher at Chicago. Cotton made small net gains, futures being up two to four points at the close. Sugar steadied on reports that Great Britain, with Canada and New Zealand, would buy around 1,750,000 tons of raw sugar from Dominion sources. Greece was reported to have purchased between six and eight thousand tons of American refined sugar at 1.87 1/2 cents per pound, 1/4 American ports; compares with a previous sale at 2.12 cents a pound.

With U. S. markets closed Thursday the London market was weak, with sharp declines in industrial shares on unfavorable war news and announcement that the 100 per cent excess profits tax will apply to all lines of business from April 1 last. Industrials in the Times averages dropped 2.3 points and rails were off .8. On the Paris Bourse anxiety over possible Italian entry into the war sent Mediterranean shares downward. There were moderate losses in the rest of the list, with trading inactive.

Turkey is planning a loan of 50,000,000 pounds to meet national defense requirements. Canada has banned withdrawal of balances held by non-residents in Canadian banks.

Electric power output in the U. S. for the week ended May 23 totaled 2,448,865,000 kwh., a gain of 11.1 per cent over the volume of the same week a year ago.

The last train to operate under B. M. T. management of transit lines in New York city will leave the 57th street-7th Avenue station at 11:45 p. m. tomorrow, arriving at Times Square just before midnight. The first train out of Times Square, at midnight, will have Mayor LaGuardia as "motor-man," and will mark the taking over by the city of the rapid transit lines.

Plant expansion programs have been announced by five companies. They are: Air Associates, a $300,000 unit at Benedit, N. J.; American Rolling Mill, a new $400,000 blast furnace at Hamilton, Ohio; Republic Steel, $200,000 at its Massillon, Ohio plant; Clark Controller, new machine shop, and General Instrument Corp., increase of facilities.

Ellenville Men Escape Death in Thursday Crash

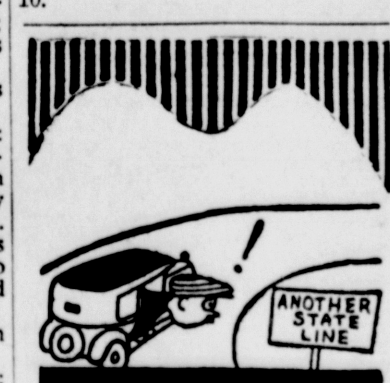

Elmer Sears, 36, and Thomas Clark, 40, both of Ellenville, narrowly escaped death Thursday when the car they were riding in ran head-on into a tree at Walker Valley in front of the home of William Doyle. They escaped with cuts and bruises, but will have X-rays taken to determine if they had suffered more serious injuries than thought.

According to State Trooper William Reynolds of Ellenville, the two men, who are employed by Mason & Hanger on the New York city Lackawack water project, had borrowed the car of William Hoffman of Ellenville, also employed by the same concern, to make a trip to New York. The state trooper said it was evident that the car was proceeding at high speed for it ran off the shoulder of the road, then back onto the road and crashed into the tree from which it rebounded and turned over twice, and was headed toward Ellenville when the car came to a stop. The trooper took both men back to Ellenville in his car. He said they refused to go to a hospital. The scene of the accident was a mile from the spot where William Hopkins, brother of Sergeant Hopkins, was killed in an auto accident on Sunday.

A BUCKET OF PAINT

Twenty-five years ago a famous editorial said:

"A bucket of paint is worth its weight in gold—or would be, if it could not be obtained for anything else. There is more joy in it, more of actual pleasure, than in anything else on earth of the same size. For it is a pleasure to see the scars of time covered up—to behold a fence, or house or barn properly painted; to observe that the owner of the premises has taken some pains to make the outlook brighter—there is nothing in the world that gives more real pleasure."

"Here are two houses. They were built about the same time. Modest in their appearance when they were built several years ago—modest in their proportions; the homes of people in the middle of life. Those two houses were alike when they were built, but look at them now."

"One is clean and fresh and bright. A bucket of paint has been applied. It is not gaudy; it is not pretentious in its appearance; it is modest and comforting to look upon, and shows that the owner must be a person of cleanliness and respectability. As you pass this newly painted house you can see through the walls, in a sense, and behold an orderly, kindly, well-disciplined family, occupying the rooms. There can be no doubt about it."

"The other house has not been painted since it was built. It is rusty and smoke-begrimed and disorderly in its appearance. The shutters are loose at one corner—in keeping with the lack of paint. A glass is broken from the window. The steps have not been swept, and the piles of trash encumber the front stoop. As you pass this house you feel sorry for the occupants. You can see through the dingy walls into a home where you feel there is little happiness and less of order. It is used as a roost, rather than a home—this shabby house that knows not the bucket of paint."

"So, taking the two houses, and studying them, we claim that a bucket of paint is the most precious thing in the world, and the owner of a home ought to be willing to make any kind of sacrifice to obtain it—and to work his fingers off in order to have it applied properly to the home."

And it's still true today, especially if you use...

Grand Jury Gives Eight Sealed Bills

In a partial report the grand jury on Wednesday afternoon reported two open indictments and eight sealed bills. There was also one dismissal and the grand jurors were excused by Justice Murray until June 10, when they will report again and clean up any pending business prior to the summer recess of the courts.

James Vedder of Saugerties was charged with burglary, third degree, and unlawful entry to a building at Notch View Park, in town of Saugerties, specifically being charged with having entered the cottage of Emily Johnston on February 14, last. He pleaded not guilty and asked that the court assign him an attorney and that bail be fixed.

was also charged with burglary, third degree, and unlawful entry for entering a chicken coop at Rochester Center on April 25, last. He, too, pleaded not guilty and asked that an attorney be assigned and bail fixed.

The one dismissal reported was that in the Jacob and Bertha Beldegreen case, in which a charge of fraudulently securing mortgaged property in violation of Section 940 of the law was lodged on April 28, 1939. They formerly operated a boarding house in the town of Shandaken.

Eight sealed bills were filed with the court.

Joys of Peace Are Uneclipsed

of the nation's soldier dead, he said, were jeopardized by the danger of "totalitarian aggression."

On the old battlefield of Gettysburg, Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania gave this message:

"Peace can be attained, if at all, first by preparing to defend ourselves; second, by tending to our business and tending to it properly; and third, by setting as our goal the vision of an America of the future which can be a rock of liberty in a sea of anarchy and dissolution."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking at Ferncliff cemetery, Ardsley, N. Y., said:

"We must keep our nation still firm in the way we have believed was the democratic way of life—none of us know from day to day what may happen."

Seventy-eight Memorial Day fatalities were counted over the nation today in what was apparently one of the safest holiday observances in recent years.

The loss of life was only 14 greater than the National Safety Council's normal average of 64 traffic deaths alone on an ordinary Thursday in May.

Child Meningitis Deaths Are Cut by New Drugs

Deaths caused by meningitis resulting from common influenza have been reduced 20 per cent since the use of sulfanilamide and sulapyridine for treatment.

"Sulapyridine promises to reduce this figure to a still lower level," according to Dr. Javier W. Lindsay and Dr. Clarence Rice, of Children's hospital, Washington, D. C.

These doctors point out that meningitis resulting from common influenza was the most common disease—excepting tuberculosis—found in children under two.

Dr. Sara E. Branham, senior bacteriologist of the National Institute of Health, reports that the two drugs had been valuable also in treating meningococcus meningitis—common spinal meningitis—in mice.
